Gold, Strange Gold.
Troubles, No Revolution.
The Universe Will Last.
When Huss Was Burned.

—By Arthur Brisbane—

STRANGE IS GOLD. Who understands it? South Africa has gone off the gold standard, although South Africa produces most of the gold.

The United States will have nothing to do with any silver standard, although the American continents are the great producers of silver.

The Federal Reserve Bank in the past week has gained $36,910,000 in genuine gold. But the circulation of money among the people has dropped.

Also, the world's surplus of wheat is increasing gigantically. Four countries have for export 745,000,000 bushels more than they need, while hundreds of millions of human beings lack bread.

There seems to be something the matter with OUR DISTRIBUTION, something that even the gold standard fetich cannot remedy.

Norman Thomas, who ran for President on the Socialist ticket, tells young college socialists how to prepare for "the fall of capitalism," and the revolution that he sees coming. Delegates from 29 Eastern universities were told: "The capitalist system is breaking down with extraordinary rapidity."

Thomas is intelligent and sincere. But he is mistaken about his revolution and the "capitalistic breakdown." Revolutions occur in homogeneous populations, not among mixed races. You may have riots, murders, bombing, but no "revolution," which involves a complete turning over of the system.

When the great-great-grandsons of the college students have gray beards, some Norman Thomas of the future will still be telling them that "capitalism is breaking down rapidly."

Things do not happen suddenly. Growth and change are slow. Our industrial feudalism, replacing military feudalism, with dollars instead of soldiers, has still a long time to go. But all honest protest does good.

Ours is "an undying universe," not running down, as the atoms throw off their electrons and energy into space. It was not created at any definite time, there never was any beginning of time. There will never be any end of time, or any end of creation.

The "intelligence," or "law," or "divine being" that started the thing going never had any beginning either, and never will have any end.

It is comforting to know that human beings only 12,000 years from the stone age have hundreds of millions of years ahead of us. Man, who owes his progress and earth-dominion to the fact that his brain keeps growing, will continue to develop, and we, the ancestors of men of the year one million, would not recognize our descendants. They will be as different from us, in looks and thinking power, as we are different from small black beetles.

It has been truly said that the mental difference between the lowest grade savage and a blade of grass is not as great as the difference between that savage and a highly developed white man. Much has been done in a few hundred centuries. What will be done in a few millions of centuries?

Religion has not lost its power. In Berlin, the Deutsche Theater produced a play by Julius Hay called, "God, Emperor and Peasant." Dealing with the personality of John Huss, the reformer, who started new religious ideas in Bohemia and ended as fuel for a bonfire, the play represents the Emperor Sigismund and Pope John XXIII as worldly-minded oppressors of John Huss, and profiteers.

The Nazis, who approve of German emperors, created disturbances at the theater. The Catholics quietly protested to the police. The show was stopped.

When he stood strapped to the execution post, with soldiers piling wood around him, he exclaimed, sancta simplicitas, "sacred simplicity," when a tiny child, anxious to help, brought a small piece of wood and added it to the bonfire.

You may burn a man like that, but you cannot obliterate his name.

No wonder the Bohemians are proud of such a man. It was the treacherous Emperor Sigismund who gave Huss a "pass" to the "Council of Constance" that should have guaranteed his safety, and then allowed him to be burned.

Police Commissioner Mulrooney of New York, an intelligent observer, who knows his big city, says the beer bill is "futile," because "we still are a nation of hard liquor drinkers."

That does not apply to the entire nation. Mr. Capone, philosophizing in his Chicago jail,

NEW JERSEY MAN OWES $350,000

Police Doubt He Committed Suicide on a Fall River Liner

Newark, N. J., Dec. 31 (AP)—Detective-Sergt. Joseph McGinley, of East Orange, who is directing the investigation of the disappearance of Robert J. Barnett, missing banker, stated today that Barnett was in debt to the extent of $350,000 when he disappeared.

The debts, McGinley learned, were in the form of notes mostly held by East Orange residents. Barnett vanished from a Fall River Line boat Wednesday night.

McGinley expressed the opinion that Barnett was still alive and probably somewhere near Boston and not a suicide as first believed.

Supporting McGinley's theory, officials of the New Haven Railroad informed the detective that a Fall River to Boston ticket had been used by a man who gave Barnett's name and address.

The same man also purchased a transportation stub from Fall River to Boston by train. This ticket was missing from Barnett's personal property found in the boat state room.

Mrs. Randall had reported that the child was kidnaped, but it turned out that little Beverly went out at 3:10 a. m. for a little walk.

BOSTON GANG LINKED IN KILLING

Father of 3 Is Slain in Battle, One Is Dying; Officer Suspended

Boston gangdom was definitely linked today with last night's fatal hijacking battle at Centerville, near Hyannis on Cape Cod, while a Barnstable policeman was identified as one of the hijackers who were repulsed by gunfire after one man had been killed.

The policeman, Special Officer Truman Lewis, a resident of Osterville, was discharged by Police Chief William H. Pratt when Lewis, under grilling, admitted taking part.

Police, state and local, uncovered clues indicating that the successful defenders of the liquor load had themselves hijacked it.

LINKED TO N. E. BIG SHOT

The cottage and garage which were the scene of the fight is believed to be a regular way-station between the Cape Cod beaches and Boston. Police say the killers are hiding in Boston, shielded by the underworld.

New developments in the method of running rum in from the sea were revealed as investigators sought to connect with the battle one of the biggest of New England liquor syndicate operators, a man singularly successful in escaping trouble in the past.

The names of the hijacking unit, all Cape Cod men, were revealed after they admitted being in the unsuccessful raid, according to police.

FATHER OF THREE SLAIN

The dead man is Franklin Bearse, 30, father of three children, of Osterville, a well known former player in the Cape Cod league and a Red Sox tryout prospect in 1927.

$1.60 Tax Cut for Boston Indicated

A tax reduction of at least $1.60 in Boston next year was indicated today by figures submitted to Mayor Curley by Budget Commissioner Fox, showing results of budget study to date.

Departmental estimates have been reduced by $6,750,000, and the total of the 1933 budget, as it now stands, is $3,000,000 less than this year.

The total is $37,613,000, with further reductions possible. Fifty-five departments or divisions, out of a total of 64, have received smaller allowances than in 1932; five had received the same allowances; four have received increases, these being the city council, collecting department, child welfare and soldiers' relief.

MAYOR SAYS HE'LL STAY ON JOB HERE

BULLETIN

Mayor Curley late today denied reports he intended to resign. A previous speech to council members was interpreted to mean that he planned to quit soon to accept a position in the cabinet under Roosevelt.

Mayor Curley at a luncheon tendered him by the City Council in the Parker House today practically announced that he will resign on March 4 or before to accept an appointment at the hands of President-elect Roosevelt.

"At the City Council meeting Tuesday," said the mayor, "I will outline to you plans for 1933 for the city. I ask your continued support of my administration, and of whoever else may be my successor during the coming year."

The mayor smiled at the stir this caused among his auditors. For a long time it has been understood that the mayor would be rewarded for his energetic campaigning in behalf of Franklin D. Roosevelt, with a cabinet post or ambassadorship and he has been most prominently mentioned for secretary of the navy or assistant secretary of the treasury.

As assistant secretary of the treasury, the mayor would take charge of construction of Federal buildings, according to reports. He has also been mentioned for secretary of the interior.

If the mayor resigns it means that the president of the city council, to be elected next week, will become mayor in his place. Edward M. Gallagher, Brighton, is the present president. He has acted as acting mayor during Curley's absences from the city.

Eight councillors have for some time been campaigning for the presidency of the council. They are:

William H. Barker, East Boston, who has said he would be "Curley's candidate for council president"; Edward M. Gallagher, Brighton, whose term as 1932 president ended today; Joseph McGrath, Dorchester, former president; Peter A. Murray, Jamaica Plain; Albert L. Fish, Dorchester; James Hein, Allston; Israel Ruby, Dorchester, and Joseph P. Cox, West Roxbury.

They were all at the luncheon today and all eyes centered on them as the mayor delivered his hint of resigning—something they have hoped for, but could not count upon. Mayor Curley's term ordinarily would not end until next December.

BUYING FOREIGN COSTS U. S. TANNERS $35,000,000

160 FIRMS SHUT, 15,000 JOBS GONE; INDUSTRY IN PERIL

"BUY AMERICAN."

American tannery workers lost $35,000,000 in wages between 1923 and 1931 because of increased importations of foreign leather.

The Calf Tanners' Association has compiled these figures—further proof of the economic harm wrought by Americans who "Buy Foreign."

In New England, particularly in Massachusetts where the tanning industry is a cornerstone of prosperity, the "Buy American" movement inaugurated nationally by the Hearst newspapers is gaining favor daily.

15,000 JOBS TAKEN

In the last nine years $245,000,000 worth of foreign leather, made by foreign workers paid less than half the wage of American workers has been dumped in the United States, causing greatly reduced domestic production and widespread unemployment.

More than 160 American tanning firms have gone out of business; 15,000 less tannery workers are at work.

The delegation of manufacturers of rubber-soled footwear who protested withdrawal of the so-called "dumping" order at a hearing before Treasury officials, in stressing the havoc caused to the domestic trade by imports of Japanese and Czechoslovakian rubber-soled footwear, gave warning that the same inroads threatened the tannery and leather shoe industries.

PRICE LEVELS SLASHED

Since 1930 there has been great deflation in the industry. Price levels have dropped in many cases to less than one-half of what they were. This has had the effect of almost nullifying some of the schedules. For example, when present rates on calf leather became effective, foreign leather was coming into the United States at 35.2 cents per foot, whereas today the average importation is about 20 cents.

These figures, it was stated, are a net reduction in the duty paid of 2¼ cents per foot, a little less than one-half of what was considered adequate protection then. This lack of protection is again beginning to show itself and import figures are gradually increasing.

Added unemployment, lower wages and "a lowering of the American standard of living to the impossible Asiatic normal" were predicted by A. H. Geuting, president of the National Shoe Retailers' Association, unless American manufacturers are protected against importations of inferior foreign products.

INDUSTRY IN PERIL

"When a division of our trade is menaced by an unhealthy competition, it behooves the merchant to think of the consequences," said Mr. Geuting in a recent statement to the Boot & Shoe Recorder. "No more serviceable division of the trade is to be found than the rubber footwear industry.

"At the very peak of its usefulness, it faces a crisis—not in the efficiencies and economies of production and distribution, but through the impossible competition of Oriental and European labor. The rubber footwear importations for the past two years are an invasion, menacing not only the rubber industry, but possibly the leather industry itself.

"A tariff is virtually no barrier for this rubber footwear. Paying a duty at 35 per cent does not compensate for the American wage scale and cost of materials.

"The importation of rubber footwear is increasing at a tremendous rate. The figures show that for the first six months of 1932 importations were 700 per cent greater than for the entire year of 1931.

JOBS AT STAKE

"Instead of the American manufacturers being able to increase wages and production, further importation can only mean one of two alternatives — ultimate lowering of production which in turn means less people employed, or less wages, which means reducing the standard of living.

"The jobs of thousands, because of this condition, are jeopardized.

"If for no other reason than a selfish one, it will pay us to buy rubber footwear manufactured in America, made by American labor—who in turn spend money in our retail stores, which increases business indirectly for everyone."

Business Leaders Laud Buy American Campaign

By CHARLES E. SPEAKS
President Firestone Footwear Co., of Boston

"I congratulate your paper on your courage to present the facts concerning the invasion of the American market by cheap and destructive competition.

"Since the war there has been a very strong movement in Great Britain and other countries in Europe to buy home manufactured products.

"Prices and bargains have become a mania with the American buying public in an effort to spread out their rapidly depreciated funds. Foreign competitors have been well experienced in handling a situation of this kind since the war. They have practically destroyed our markets in foreign countries by their price invasion on goods manufactured at almost slavery labor, and the last three years have invaded American markets.

"This matter was called to the attention of Washington a year ago, and yet in the election some of our ambitious citizens made the tariff issue so vital that it retarded any relief that might have been afforded to manufacturers to stem this influx of cheap products.

"I believe there is nothing the Hearst papers have done in the last two years that will have such hearty support from the entire nation as your effort in overcoming this evil."

By JOHN C. AUSTIN

"The return to prosperity will be materially speeded up if the people of the United States follow the 'buy American' slogan that you are featuring in your publications.

"If those writing specifications covering the construction or manufacture of any item would make a point of demanding that the materials should not only be manufactured but the raw material mined in the United States, and if those who are purchasing materials through our stores were to ascertain that American goods were being offered to them, our return to prosperity would be very rapid and our unemployment problem quickly solved.

"It has been a very easy thing for us to believe that goods of a foreign manufacture were superior to our own, when as a matter of fact after careful analysis it would be found that goods manufactured in America are second to none in the world.

"It is my opinion that American goods only should be used in the construction of buildings that are financed by the taxpayers; also that only American citizens should be employed on such buildings."

his heart today by Dr. E. F. Curry of Sagamore. Bearse was first felled by shotgun pellets striking his heels. Apparently the runners then deliberately took his life as he lay wounded.

Seriously wounded and probably dying is Manuel Robello, 27, of Cotuit, who was shot through the lungs by shotgun fire.

The others who police say admit being among the raiders are Joseph Correia, Santuit; Ned Ashley, Santuit; John Lewis, Osterville, brother of the policeman. James Mendes, former heavyweight boxer, of Osterville, denied being implicated.

Police discovered today that the garage, built only a short time ago, and which is considerably larger than the cottage, was wired so that when the hijackers broke the lock on the door, a bell rang in the cottage.

The hijackers, taken by surprise, abandoned all thought of the load of choice liquor on a truck in the garage, and took to wild flight. They returned to get Bearse, but forgot Robello. The killers also fled, taking their liquor.

Police connected the liquor cargo with a theft of liquor from the sound off Osterville a short time ago.

In recent months the practice of rum runners has been to drop liquor overboard not far from shore. The cases lie submerged, until the proper parties arrive to salvage them. As the cases are strung together, salvaging is not difficult. But hijackers beat the consignees to the scene on one occasion and took the entire load.

On Mrs. Hazel Schools, now in collapse in her parent's home in Beverly, and on a scientific analysis of the organs of her husband and a pet rabbit, the authorities of New London, Ct., today pinned their hopes of solving Connecticut's most puzzling death mystery.

Mrs. Schools will be questioned immediately upon her return to her New London home, for information she may be able to supply about family food and other matters.

FIGHT FOR U. S. GOODS AHEAD IN SENATE

Sen. McKellar Seeks U. S. Supplies Be Made Here

Washington, Dec. 31—Goods purchased by the United States government should be grown, manufactured and produced in America by Americans.

This demand was made today by Senator McKellar of Tennessee, second ranking Democrat on the appropriations committee, which is charged with overseeing the use of federal funds.

HIGH TARIFF ASKED

At the same time, Rep. Frank Crowther (R.), of New York, announced he would wage a fight to assess tariffs on goods manufactured by pauperized foreign labor, to compensate for depreciated foreign currencies.

McKellar declared he would offer an amendment to every appropriation bill coming over from the House, providing that no purchases of foreign goods by the federal government be permitted.

He said:

FOREIGN GOODS BANNED

"This provision should be in every bill, and I shall fight for it. It is high time Americans gave more thought to their own country, particularly in view of the outrageous treatment accorded us by nations which have refused to pay their honorable debts."

In the House, a bill requiring the use of American materials in public buildings is pending on the unanimous consent calendar. Rep. Wilson (D.), of Louisiana, its author, said unless it is agreed to he will seek to have it enacted under a special rule.

CONNALLY AND HURLEY IN NEW WAR OF WORDS

Again Clash Over the Shifting of Troops From Remote Posts

Washington, Dec. 31 (AP)—Senator Connally (D., Tex.) reiterated today that Secretary Hurley had said that troops were moved from Marfa, Tex., to Camp Knox, Ky., to concentrate soldiers near populous centers to cope with possible "Red" disturbances.

Hurley last night said he "had never told Connally that this country was in any danger from Communism or Bolshevism."

"Since he mentioned it," Hurley said, "I think the country is suffering more, and will suffer more, from pork-barrel politicians."

Connally retorted today:

"Mr. Hurley knows that I correctly quoted him. Those who were present also know what he said.

"Mr. Hurley makes some reference to politicians and pork barrels. The secretary is an expert on pork. High army officers were on the point of moving the Army School of Fire from Fort Sill, Oklahoma, to a point elsewhere.

"Mr. Hurley is from Oklahoma. His inordinate appetite for pork prompted him as secretary of war to stop the removal and keep the troops in Oklahoma."

RACER AND GIRL PART IN COURT

Howard Edward Cole, 29, of Detroit, whose speed on the auto race tracks is no faster than his celerity on the pathways of love, had his wings clipped today.

And Daisy Sinclair, 19, of Linwood st., Hyde Park, went home with mother—sadder, wiser, but still eager to marry Cole, she said.

Cole, who already has a wife, was fined $25 in East Boston court today. The girl's case was placed on file. They had been arrested on Revere.

But while the girl went home with her mother, Cole was turned over to the Boston municipal court probation department where he has a month's sentence hanging over him on a bad check charge.

Cole is known as "Buckey" Collins in auto racing circles. The Hyde Park girl was to have married him last summer in front of the grand stand at Readville but Cole's wife appeared. She said her husband was always falling in love with other girls.

Let's Forgive and Forget

--By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER--

That's the wrong spirit. We should all put our shoulders to the wheel and yank it off.

A house divided against itself must have elevator service. We should let the dead bury its quota and start 1933 feeling that justice and right will triumph if you live long enough.

We are all little eggs in the same omelet. Why not let bygones be farewells and face the future with confidence, hope and a two-thirds plurality?

Whether Republican or Democrat we know that the man wears out before the high silk hat. There are many new brooms in Washington today but it's the same old kitchen.

We are sympathetic with the lads who are packing their congressional bags. But, in order to avoid the semblance of hypocrisy, we wish them a happy New Year dated as of January 1, 1937.

Who Interest You and What They Are Doing

Rockefeller Hopeful of Good Homes in 1933

Ormond Beach, Fla., Dec. 31 (INS)—John D. Rockefeller, Sr., prepared today to observe New Year's Eve—his 93d—with the hope that the year 1933 would see an end to the world-wide economic depression.

John D. Rockefeller, Sr.

"I am hopeful that 1933 will bring better times to all the world; although I can see no immediate end of the depression, I am hoping for the best," he said.

Tonight he will entertain friends at a whist and radio party to greet the new year. Rockefeller plays whist with cards of special design; red, white and blue in color and the size of a hotel hat check.

Janet Gaynor Sails Minus Husband

San Francisco, Dec. 31—Janet Gaynor, of movie fame, is today aboard the liner President Hoover heading for Honolulu, where she will spend a four weeks' vacation.

Janet Gaynor

Miss Gaynor, who recently announced she intended divorcing Lydell Peck, Oakland attorney, sailed from here yesterday accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Laura Gaynor, and Mrs. Eva Rothing of Hollywood.

She refused to be interviewed, explaining that she had been working hard and was very tired.

Ford Feels So Good He's Dancing Again

Henry Ford

In the ultra modern setting of the Ford engineering laboratory, Mr. and Mrs. Ford led 200 guests through the steps of the schottische, the varsouvienne and the waltz last night in the first of their old-style dances this season. It was Mr. Ford's first appearance at a large gathering since his operation a month ago.

NAVY AIDS HUNT FOR BODIES

Two naval planes flew over Massachusetts Bay in ever-widening circles today, with observers peering into the depths of the sea, in an effort to locate the wreckage of a plane and the bodies of two Harvard students who crashed to their death two days ago.

At the same time a navy tug, a commercial tug, three Coast Guard patrol boats and a surfboat from the Nahant Coast Guard station carried on a search from the surface of the sea.

Despite the tides, Coast Guards said they could not account for the necessity for such a prolonged search for a large biplane which evidently fell in only about 50 feet of water.

The missing bodies are those of Donald McKay Frost, Jr., 19, of Exeter st., Back Bay, and Edward Mallinckrodt, 20, of St. Louis, both sons of millionaire parents. Relatives of the two youths were on the scene on a tug today.

told this writer: "Our business in Chicago is beer. That is what Chicago drinks. In New York it is whiskey. Therefore, we consider our racket harmless, in fact, beneficial, since it means beer instead of whiskey."

Bucharest reports a Russian airplane shot down by Polish fliers when it crossed the Russian line at Hotin, a sort of triple corner, where Poland, Russia and Rumania meet. Three Polish planes shot down the Russian plane, three other Russian airplanes came to the rescue too late.

That might start interesting developments. Nations dwelling along the Russian border may regret it if they allow their angry passions to rise too high.

(Copyright, 1932, by International News Service)

Colon, Panama, Dec. 31 (INS)—With all his early bitterness replaced by a tolerant cynicism, Prof. Albert Einstein replied today to the charges made against him by the American women who sought to bar him from the United States because he is a Pacifist.

The ban was asked by the Women's Patriots' organization, which charged that the physicist's pacifist doctrines indicated Communistic affiliations.

"GREATEST REBUFF"

"Never in all my life," Professor Eintein said, "have I received such an energetic rebuff from the fair sex.

"But are they not right, these vigilant women citizens of the United States?

"Why should they allow me to come to their country, a man who devours tough capitalists with the same appetite and pleasure as the monstrous minotaur of ancient Crete gulped down dainty Greek maidens, and who in addition is so mean as to deny the right for every war except the unavoidable conflict with one's own wife?

"CACKLING GEESE"

"So listen to the warning of these precious and patriotic women and remember as I have observed before that mighty Rome once was saved by the cackling of its faithful geese."

From Panama, the Einsteins will proceed to California, where the professor will continue his observations at the Mt. Wilson Observatory.

JUST LIKE 'M-A-A-A-MMY'S'

Next to enthralling his audiences with maaaammy songs, Al Jolson is fondest of doughnuts nothing else but. Especially after he's been ill. The famous blackface comedian has just recovered from an attack of the flu, and with the return of his appetite he's making up for lost time. He's shown here after arriving in Chicago for a double filling—his taste for doughnuts and a theatrical engagement. (Int. News Photos.)

'LOVE HIM,' SAYS AIMEE, DENYING DIVORCE TALE

David Is Dearest Boy in World, Declares Evangelist

Los Angeles, Dec. 31 (AP)—Although reported confined to her bed by severe illness, Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton today took notice of persistent rumors that she and her husband, David L. Hutton, Jr., choir singer, were planning a divorce, by issuing an emphatic denial.

"I want the world to know I love him," the evangelist said. "I was alone for 17 years. He is the dearest boy in the world, and even if I didn't love him, I wouldn't get a divorce."

Earlier in the day Mrs. Hutton announced plans to make a tour of the world, visiting her missions. She said she would leave in February and would be accompanied only by her mother-in-law, Mrs. Davis Hutton, Sr.

"I am going to travel incognito as much as possible," the evangelist said. "I must escape from publicity and crowds and excitement."

The evangelist said her husband—David Hutton, Jr.—would remain in Los Angeles to manage Angelus Temple, of which she is pastor.

'Dead' for an Hour, Revived by Dye

San Francisco, Dec. 31 (AP)—Allen D. Mabry, 54, who emergency hospital attendants declared lay for an hour dead from carbon monoxide, was revived here last night by an injection of methylene blue—a common dye.

The treatment, developed by two University of California scientists, recently was used successfully here in a case of cyanide poisoning. So far as is known, it is the first time used in carbon monoxide treatment.

SWANS UP SWANSDOWN ALL AT ONCE

Forty pounds of swan is a lot of swan, if you ask us. But this one, Lohengrin, belongs to the Richard Saltonstalls of Sherborn, who do everything in a big way. Lohengrin, who is a children's pet, is shown with Elizabeth Grindle. Each is the other's favorite. Lohengrin—a swell name, I swanny!—will be exhibited at the 84th Boston Poultry Show in Mechanics Building Jan. 1-5. A pair of swans could do a lot of necking, couldn't they? (Boston American photo.)

CUPID, STORK, DEATH, ALL LAG

There were fewer deaths in Boston this year than last, also fewer marriages and fewer births.

Boston's 1932 death rate is the lowest since 1921. A new low record for infant mortality was established, also for typhoid and pulmonary tuberculosis.

Deputy Health Commissioner Joseph W. Manahan made his report on vital statistics today, outstanding among which were the following:

Deaths, this year, 10,920; last year, 11,023. Death rate, 13.85. Infant deaths, 1020; last year, 1039. Deaths from pulmonary tuberculosis, 468; last year, 509. Deaths of children under two years, from diarrhoea and enteritis, 64; last year, 86. Typhoid deaths, 4; last year, 7.

GIBSON GIRL IN COLLAPSE AT HER LOSS

Death of Babe Is Final Blow in Tragic Happenings

By DOROTHY DUCAS.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Tappan, N. Y., Dec. 31 (INS)—The baby of Charlotte Gibson and Sidney Herbert Homewood, like her parents' love, has died.

The 12-day-old girl, whose existence brought rancor, resentment and humiliation to both her society mother and her riding-master father "just wasted away," Robert Gibson, her stern grandfather said.

She died without ever seeing her father, and her mother is said to be in a state of collapse brought on by the ordeal of her testimony at Homewood's trial for seduction, by a difficult birth of the child and by grief over the death.

LOVE WASTED, TOO

When Charlotte Gibson knew she was to be born the rift between her and Homewood was made. From then on the emotional bonds between the two "wasted away," until the final knell was wrung with the sensational suit that sent Homewood to prison for one and a half to three years.

Charlotte clung to her faith in her child from that day in June when she knew for certain that there was to be a child. Whatever the father felt, whatever the grandparents, there was no doubt that Charlotte would lavish boundless affection on the defenseless cause of all the trouble.

HOMEWOOD INDIFFERENT

She went through the trial, through the birth of the baby with stoicism. Always—on the witness stand or in her home—you could feel the words her mind was saying: "Anyway, there will be the baby left."

Now, that, too, is gone.

Homewood appeared absolutely indifferent, when he was informed of the death in New City Jail. He has disclaimed all interest in the baby or in Charlotte, saying he preferred jail to a marriage with the brunette horsewoman whose affair with him was, he maintains, of her own volition.

Police to Throw Off Lid for New Year's Celebrators

Rather than wholesale liquor raids at hotels, cafes and such, police will be especially vigilant toward the protection of the celebrating public. Their principal job will be to prevent holdups, safebreaks and any other major crime.

There are certain Sunday ordinances, principally that against dancing, which must be observed, Crowley told his captains. But for the most part they must worry themselves more against general crime prevention, the superintendent said, in what was apparently a last minute change of orders.

Federal dry agents, however, will be snooping as usual, according to the Rev. Jonathan Lewis, prohibition administrator for this district.

"I have no comment to make on the attitude of the Boston police," said Lewis today. "We are here to enforce the prohibition law, and we intend to do so. Our agents will keep the lid on as tight as possible."

Clubs, rather than hotels, are in for the bulk of the business, it appeared today. Clubs that are chartered by the Commonwealth may continue dancing into the Sunday hours as far as the Boston police are concerned.

The police have no jurisdiction over such licenses, and hotel men have fought in vain to get the same dancing right.

Most of the churches in the city will hold watch night services both tonight and tomorrow night.

In Catholic circles, the New Year will be ushered in promptly at the stroke of 12, with midnight mass at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross and St. James' Church, Harrison ave. The usual 3:30 a. m. mass for night workers will also be held at St. James'.

SALES TAX PLAN UP WEDNESDAY

Washington, Dec. 31 (AP)—Chairman Collier today issued a formal statement stressing his opposition to sales tax proposals pending before the ways and means committee which is to meet next Wednesday to canvass the fiscal condition of the government.

The Mississippi Democrat said reports that he was urging consideration of the sales tax were not correct, but that the proposal would be before the committee for consideration along with other revenue propositions.

MAYOR BLAMED BY HULTMAN

Police Commr. Hultman's annual report was delivered to Gov. Ely's office today by Leo Schwartz, legal adviser to the commissioner. As the Governor will not return to his office until next week, the report will not be made public until then.

It was learned, however, that in his report, Hultman places the blame for failure to install a short wave radio communication system in the police department on Mayor Curley.

The report also deals with the police probe of the public welfare department, as was learned, and will say that the investigation was stopped at the order of the mayor.

As for a New Year's eve celebration:

'BUY AMERICAN' -:- We Can Do What Britain Did to Boost Trade

Great Britain long ago inaugurated a campaign to educate the nation to purchase goods madė only in the Empire, either at home or overseas. This huge "Buy British" electric sign was erected in Trafalgar sq., London, as part of the educational campaign. A move to protect and support American industries is now sweeping this country. You can help. "Buy American" yourself! Urge your friends to "Buy American!" United effort of the people of this country to "Buy American" will mean the restoration of American prosperity. "Buyers are builders!" That's the slogan on this poster urging the people of Great Britain to "Buy British!" That's a good slogan for the United States, too. BUY AMERICAN and be AMERICAN BUILDERS!" Spend your money on American-made products! Daily in the Boston Evening American you will find expressions from national leaders urging the country to "BUY AMERICAN" so that our near paralyzed industries can be started moving again and people put to work. Casassa Forces Out Fouhy and Santrie

William F. Fouhy, commissioner of public welfare at a salary of $2800, resigned at Casassa's request. Walter Santrie, commissioner of public works at a salary of $4000, who failed to resign, was fired. Both were appointed by Casassa two years ago.

Chelsea Police O.K. 10-20 P. C. Cut

Chelsea police today agreed unanimously to a wage reduction of 10 to 20 per cent proposed by Mayor Quigley. Nearly all the firemen have likewise agreed. Quigley warned that regular pay days might be only a memory if they didn't take a cut, as banks refused to lend the city money.

The reductions: Those getting up to $1400, 10 per cent; from $1400 to $2500, 15 per cent; from $2500 to $3000, 17½ per cent; all over $3000, 20 per cent.

2 Safes in Newton Looted of $600

Safecrackers hammered the combinations off two safes in Newton early today and escaped with $600. They obtained the money in the office of the Suburban Home Laundry, 225 California st., which they entered by means of a clothes chute.

They later scaled a roof of the Newton Ferrule Co., 227 California st., cracked the combination of a safe with a sledge hammer, but found no cash.

MAYOR IN NEW YEAR READING RESOLUTION

New Year's being practically nothing at all without resolutions for the New Year, many noted personages sat down today and thought out, with some care, their aims for 1933.

First on the list is Mayor Curley's:

Then there's Police Superintendent Michael H. Crowley's "resolution."

"I wish," he said, "that somebody would give me information leading to the arrest of Old Man Depression. That's all I want for the coming year—a chance to grab the Old Man and let a judge commit him to jail for life."

Atty.-Gen. Joseph E. Warner made this resolution: "To rededicate myself to the service of the common people for the fullest measure of justice for them which the statutes controlling my office allow."

Supt. Crowley Dist. Atty. Foley

Dist.-Atty. William J. Foley: In a hope for better times and the repeal of prohibition, I extend the season's greetings.

Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook: To assure myself at all times that every member of my department continues to give to the people courteous, honest, efficient and impartial service, for in that way only is it possible to repay the continued confidence accorded me by the electorate.

Sheriff John A. Keliher: With the dawn of a new year and the incoming "new deal" in government at Washington, may I express my wishes to everyone for a happy and prosperous 12-month.

Sheriff Keliher Postmaster Hurley

Postmaster William E. Hurley: My New Year's wish is one of preparation for the work entrusted to me, that I may be able to to meet my obligations and deal fairly with the men under me, that the public be enlightened on the advantages of mailing early at Christmas time.

U. S. Commissioner Edwin C. Jenney: I will be on the job as usual attending to my duties. We had a large number of cases this year. My word for the coming year is "resolve."

Asst. U. S. Atty. John J. Walsh, Jr.: I will continue paying attention to business and shall work as hard the coming year as in the past.

Asst. U. S. Atty. Haven Parker: Keep plugging will be my motto for the coming year.

Asst. U. S. Atty John W. Schenck: I've resolved to keep the friends I have made by practicing the Golden Rule.

Prohibition Administrator Jonathan A. Lewis: Personally, I resolve to do my duty as I see it. There will be no let-up in our work.

U. S. Marshal William J. Keville: As long as the pendulum swings the working hours I shall pay attention to the duties imposed upon me, and that goes for the coming year.

Mayor Lawrence F. Quigley of Chelsea: That next year I will not be late for supper when Mrs. Quigley has planned something unusually good.

That I will try to get the people of Chelsea to work together in a solution of our problems.

Mayor Andrew A. Casassa of Revere: As we enter the New Year, let us do so in a spirit of thanks for the good things of the past and with a firm hope that 1933 will usher in a period of prosperity for all our people.

Old-Time Bike Bill Collector Dies

For many years he made collections for his firm, using a bicycle. In 1900 he set up a record of pedaling 38,887 miles in the year, averaging 106 miles daily, winter and summer.

Understand the gag above? So, ya catch on quick-like, do you? Anybody who knows Helen Hayes would. For her stunning achievement in "A Farewell to Arms" she was awarded the prized motion picture trophy for the best performance of 1932, which makes her America's leading lady. That's why she's on top of the world. And above you see her playing billiards in her home in Beverly Hills, Cal. And she was behind the eight-ball, so there! If you're interested, Helen made a combination shot and not only put the 3-ball in but scratched, too. Like an actress, she took her cue—and traded it for another. Helen is well known in Boston, where she appeared in "Coquette," "What Every Woman Knows," etc. She's married to Charlie MacArthur, explosive newspaperman, about whom are told many stories. Here's one: Once Helen was returning to Beverly Hills after a long absence; Charlie, being a great practical joker, rushed out and bought $400 worth of feminine underwear which he scattered all over the house. You can imagine what Helen thought. She didn't speak to him—honestly—for two weeks. Helen Hayes? It was Helen MacArthur! (International News Photos.)

VOICE OF BROADWAY

By LOUIS SOBOL

Prattle and Tattle

The Laurence (Jennie Marston) Tibbetts will be chanting lullabies to a bassineteer when the leaves turn green again. Out on the Coast, the Hoot (Sally Eilers) Gibsons are straining at the marital leash again, and here in Manhattan Tuesday night, Rhea Sarnoff, dtr. of the hatter, eloped with Ballplayer Jonah Goldman. Jean Harlow, who is changing her escorts weekly, is letting Monroe Owsley pay for the orchids and couvert charges this week, and incidentally, Jean Malin, occupying Jan Rubini's home out on the Coast is tossing the most distinguished parties of the day with flicker celebs fighting for invitations. Of the many comments regarding the Radio City Music Hall opening Tuesday night, I like Pat Kelly's best. After surveying the impressive immenseness of the place, she chirped, "It'll only be a matter of time before Radio City secedes from the Union." Charley Samuels, veteran waiter at Reuben's dropped dead Wednesday night, half an hour after he confided to me that he was planning to take his first vacation in years after the New Year on the tips he expected to receive. (Opal Essant: Get in touch with me. There's aid awaiting you.) Joe Frisco is out of the Dover Club and Arthur Budd and Francis Dunn, horticulturists, got temperamental Wednesday night and failed to show up at the Tech Club, so Helen Kane, sitting at a floorside table, got up and boop-boop-a-dooped for the customers.

A. E. Rothstein, father of the late Arnold Rothstein, is ill and destitute at the Beth Israel Hospital. In Los Angeles, the telephone company spent more than $50,000 this past year insuring secrecy regarding telephone numbers of notables. Ed Conne resigns from Sound Studios, Jan. 1st. Betty Morris, dancing hostess at Roseland, and Ira Gluckman, the realtor, are altar-bound. Most of the little California gals imported by Granny for the Paradise are bedded with the flu.

The Cobina (William May) Wrights have separated. Arthur Swanstrom trained off to Miami the other day to discuss things with his wife, who is divorcing him. Jack Oakie has picked up the Flaming Ember for Mary Leland, secretary to Ed Small. The Radio City Music Hall reverses things. The double letters such as "AA," "BB," etc., are the seats down front. Huntly Gordon, the cinemactor, wants his epitaph on his tombstone: "Here lies Huntly Gordon. If I don't get into Heaven, it'll be because I'm not the type!" Box office low for all time: Less than $5 was taken in for the Monday night's performance of "Anybody's Game" at the Bijou. Francis Lederer's secretary claims to be a genuine German baron.

Harriet Hilliard, the blond warbler, frequently reported engaged to Ozzie Nelson, will elope with the wealthy amateur tennis player, Fred Baehler. The Doukhobors, strange cult of Russian nudists, who now occupy territory in Canada, have approached a leading local producer, asking him to buy land for them in Mexico, where they plan to shift their colony and their $80,000,000 community fortune. The Theater Guild may revive some of its past hits. The lass who accompanied Bob Reud (you remember! They've linked his name with Greta Garbo) to the R. C. Music Hall opening was Mrs. Joseph B. Vanderbilt. Author Arthur B. Reeves, because of some squabble with the telephone company, refuses to permit a telephone in his home. John Gilbert and Virginia Bruce parted for two days last week—reason mysterious! Among the interesting Christmas gifts was the huge silver dish given to Walter Hampden by his company. On it he is credited with the attributes of his favorite character, Cyrano, i. e: "Swordsman, lover, statesman, politician, equestrian, litterateur, dramatist, poet, man of letters—and gentleman!"

Clap Calloused Mitts for the realization of Roxy's vast dream—Radio City Music Hall and Roxy Theater. Stupendous achievements, but it's too bad a better show wasn't assembled for the Music Hall premiere. Of all that array of talent we can offer applause only for the dancing Ray Bolger, the dainty Patricia Bowman and the ballet. Clap Calloused Mitts, too, for the charm and grace of Marie Gambarelli, premiere danseuse at the Roxy; for the impressive performances of Lionel and John Barrymore in "Rasputin"; Osgood Perkins as the dizzy author in hilarious farce, "Good-bye Again," at the Masque; the vivacious Ella Logan at her peppy blues at the Torch Club; Bee Lillie's warble, "I'm a Camp-Fire Girl," at El Patio; Walter Hampden never better in his Cyrano de Bergerac role at the New Amsterdam, and "Wise Guy," a biography about James J. Johnston, by Marcus Griffin, a fascinating tome.

Local bootleggers are angling for wine agencies, and one of the dark secrets of Governor-elect Lehman's past is that he used to play the 'cello. The Guinan gal claims charity begins at home, but usually died from lack of outdoor exercise. The highest cover charge in town for New Year's Eve will be the Mayfair's—$25 a head, but it includes supper. The Astors' Dinner Club at the Waldorf will charge $20 a head. The average assessment at the night clubs and speaks will be from $7.50 a head to $15. Friends hint at a rift between the John Drinkwaters. One of the local Russian restaurants soaks its waiters $50 each for the privilege of working there without pay and retains the fee, even though in many cases, the waiter is fired after a week. Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld travels Down Memory Lane soon. And in wishing you a Happy New Year, let me remind you that a gent once said that doing business without advertising is like winking at a girl in the dark. You know what you're doing but nobody else does.

ALL SET FOR THE BIG SHOW

YEGGS ESCAPE AFTER CHASE

Two safecrackers, chased five miles through Cambridge, Arlington, Somerville and Medford, escaped early today after they were foiled in a Cambridge break.

Telephone calls to Cambridge police from two women reported suspicions of the pair near the office of Clark Bros., Massachusetts ave., North Cambridge.

The yeggs in an auto had a good start toward Arlington when the Cambridge cruising car answered the call. Word was flashed ahead and Sergt. Daniel Barry, of Arlington, relayed the warning by radio to Sergt. Thomas Meagher in a cruising car.

The message had just been received by Meagher when the machine was seen to turn from Massachusetts ave., Arlington, into Alewife Brook pkwy. The pursuers roared through Arlington, over Clarendon Hill in Somerville and into Medford sq., where the coupe darted out of sight. The combination of the Cambridge safe had been knocked off but no money was taken. Police found a set of burglar tools.

Birthday Cake Costs Mother Life

Norwalk, Ct., Dec. 31 (INS)—Gas from an unlighted oven in which she planned to bake her 11-year-old daughter's birthday cake killed Mrs. Stephen Danyar, 36, today.

Circumstances of the tragedy were learned today when Medical Examiner Dr. William H. McMahon completed his investigation. He called the death accidental.

Fired, Worker Shoots Boss, Then Kills Self

Chicago, Dec. 31 (INS)—Donald Harper, 35, discharged today by the Link-Belt Co., shot and perhaps fatally wounded John J. Hartley, 30, company engineer, and then killed himself.

"Charlie Chaplin" Out for Honors at Cat Show

The hairless cat of last year's cat show has this year given way to the "Charlie Chaplin feline" which will be on exhibition at Horticultural Hall next Thursday and Friday.

More than 150 cats of all kinds and descriptions, of all colors and forms, of all breeds and specialties will be exhibited at the 28th annual show of the Boston Cat Club.

The "Charlie Chaplin" cat, owned by Miss Sally Cassidy, of Springfield, is black and white. Over its white mouth is a perfectly described Chaplin mustache, naturally formed from the contrasting black coloring.

Its front paws have seven toes each, which strut and spread in the comedian's fashion of walking.

Each year the club aims to present one special feature. This year however, many features are to be offered, Mrs. Raymond of Winchester, president of the club, announces.

In addition there will be Jeanne Uk, the mascot cat belonging to the police of Station 1. A white Persian cat will leave Deer Island and bid for honors in the show, that the Suffolk County House of Correction, where it hibernates, might be proud. This cat has one yellow and one blue eye.

From Bogota, N. J., Miss Elsa Hyden will bring her undefeated three Persians. Mrs. F. Warfel of New Jersey is to judge all the classes.

Siamese cats, now quite the fashionable thing for Milady's pet will be on display, as will household cats and kittens. The show will last two days.

One of the splendid entries will be the Persian Saxby-Silver Monarch, owned by Mrs. T. Denton Carman, Jr., of Center st., Newton.

DIVORCEE HELD IN CAMBRIDGE VET'S FATE

Rhode Island State police today began dragging the sound between Prudence Island and Bristol for the body of William Dupont, Cambridge war veteran and accused wife deserter, missing since a Christmas night hunting party on the island.

A young divorcee and a woman companion, arrested early today in connection with the disappearance were sent to Newport County jail for hearing January 6 on charges of disorderly conduct.

The jailed pair, Mrs. Rose Paul, 25, and George Dion, 22, both of Bristol, R. I., admitted they were with Dupont on the hunt, police said.

Police were convinced that Dupont died on Prudence Island, R. I., either by foul play or accident while rabbit hunting. The body has not been found.

They hinted at the "eternal triangle" in charges that the young divorcee has posed at various times as the wife of Dupont. The missing man's real wife and three children are living with Mrs. Dupont's mother, Mrs. Laura Barchey of Otis st., Cambridge.

Mrs. Mary Dupont, wife of the missing man, showed no sympathy for her husband as she huddled together in her mother's home Joseph, Jr., 14, Walter, 8, and Robert, 7.

"It's just what he deserved. Whatever happened to him he had it coming," she said.

AUSTRIA TO PAY LOAN INTEREST

Basel, Switzerland, Dec. 31 (AP)—The Austrian government informed the Bank for International Settlements today that arrangements had been made to pay the Jan. 2 interest instalment on the $55,000,000 international loan of 1930 in the currencies of the respective creditors.

Austria not only will pay interest coupons on the American, British, Italian, Swedish and Swiss shares, but also on the Austrian issue. The Bank of International Settlements acts as trustee of the loan.

CARDINAL WEDS ROYAL ITALIANS

Rome, Dec. 31 (AP)—The most brilliant wedding Rome has seen in years, with the exception of the marriage of the Crown Prince in 1930, took place today with the union of Princess Sveva Vittoria Colonno, daughter of Don Marcantonio Colonna, to Don Alfonso, Prince Pio, related to the Spanish royal house.

The bride's father heads one of the two leading families of the papal, or so-called "black aristocracy," which gave the church one Pope and a dozen cardinals.

After the wedding the bridal party was received by the Pope.

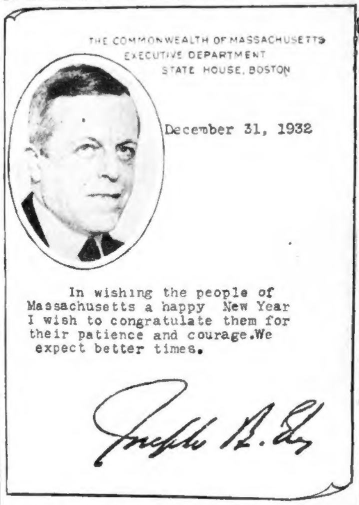
Manuel S. Sigren, Chilean consul here, who will protest to Gov. Ely about his treatment by state and Boston police after his arrest for speeding yesterday in Darien, Ct.

SAME TO YOU, MANY OF 'EM



THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT
STATE HOUSE, BOSTON

December 31, 1932

In wishing the people of Massachusetts a happy New Year I wish to congratulate them for their patience and courage. We expect better times.

Joseph B. Ely

Well, we are that baffled! Look what Governor Ely says in his letter above. He was re-elected in 1932—but he hopes for better things in 1933! But he doesn't mean it that way. Well, everybody else hopes for better things, too—jobs and beer and money. Happy days, Governor! (Boston American photo.)

All Weymouth Firemen Fight to Save Pneumonia Victim

The entire Weymouth fire department, working in relays, battled today to keep the specter of death from a sick room in North Weymouth, while airplanes and trains rushed a son of the patient from San Francisco.

The patient is James Conrad, 68, foreman for a Quincy Point coal company. The scene of the grim fight is 32 Bridge st., where firemen were using an inhalator to keep Conrad breathing.

Conrad was sent to bed by a severe cold two weeks ago and pneumonia developed. An inhalator was sent for last night, and early today its continuous use began, with firemen working in three-hour shifts.

Percy Conrad, the son, a foreman at the Mare Island navy yard, Vallejo, Cal., is on his way here, and the firemen hope, if they cannot save his father's life, to keep him alive at least until his son arrives. The patient's wife is at the bedside with a nurse and doctor.

Mayor Rejects City Lighting Plant Plan

Existing laws and present financial conditions make it impossible for Boston to build and operate its own municipal power plant, Mayor Curley said today in a message to the council, vetoing its order of Dec. 19.

"Even if the city were in a financial condition to engage in this enterprise," the message said, "the handicap would be too great for its success until such time as the Legislature sees fit to amend the laws so that a municipal corporation may establish a lighting plant without being under obligation of purchasing existing plants."

The mayor reminded the council that he has always been an advocate of municipally owned power plants.

CONSUL ANGRY OVER ARREST

An international incident was threatened today by the arrest for speeding of Manuel S. Sigren, Chilean consul at Boston, at Darien, Ct., yesterday. It might even go to the League of Nations, if the United States belonged to same.

Sigren announced today he would protest to Gov. Ely because Massachusetts authorities failed to identify him by wire when he was being detained at Darien.

The Darien police sergeant, it seems refused to recognize international treaties. That is the way Sigren puts it. The sergeant said, according to Sigren:

"Why, mister, I'd arrest the Pope or the king of Spain if they came speeding through Darien."

After a time the sergeant telegraphed to the state house here and to Boston police about Sigren.

"To my surprise, the state police answered that they did not know me, although I'm in touch with them constantly on official matters," said the consul.

The Darien incident ended, Sigren said, with the sergeant convinced that while Sigren could be stopped and his number taken, he could not be deprived of his liberty for a moment.

MARY PICKFORD IN NEW ROLE

Buddy Rogers to Play Opposite Star in "Shanty Town," Tale From Frances Marion's Pen

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Dec. 31—"Secrets" is not Mary Pickford's swan song. Far from saying "Adieu" to her public, Mary now has her sleeves rolled up and will start "Shanty Town" within eight weeks after she finishes "Secrets," Buddy Rogers, whose contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer failed to materialize will emote opposite her.

Louella O. Parsons

Leonard Praskins, who adapted "Min and Bill" and "The Champ," both by Frances Marion, is on the United Artists lot now whipping "Shanty Town" into shape. "Shanty Town" is also a Frances Marion story and was written with Mary in mind.

If Frank Borzage is back from the Orient in time he will again direct Miss Pickford. He and Mrs. Borzage sail Jan. 28 on the maiden voyage of the Lurline.

Another 'Cisco Kid'

What to do with players under contract is no small one for the producers. The public is so fickle that it will seldom stand for a repeat on a success. Yet Winfield Sheehan is going to take a chance with Warner Baxter and again put him in a "Cisco Kid" story. You will remember his first, "In Old Arizona," was exceedingly profitable and popular. Al Rockett will be in charge and he has been instructed to see that the new "Cisco Kid" ranks with the first and surpasses the two intervening numbers.

Bette for Arliss Film

The prettiest and most comely of First National's leading ladies are always given George Arliss for his pictures. I should have said the youngest, too. You might think this a bit incongruous for a man of Mr. Arliss' mature years, but some way the stories are so written we never seem to feel that he should be romancing with an older woman. Bette Davis, who was his youthful vis a vis in "The Man Who Played God," will again be his leading lady. Hardie Albright draws the juvenile lead so maybe the romance, after all, is between Bette and Mr. Albright.

Chatter in Hollywood

Ronald Colman's dinner party, given the night after Christmas to his intimates, was really in the nature of a farewell affair. Ronald is packing up within a month and sailing for Europe. He plans to be away from Hollywood two years. That means he will not permit Samuel Goldwyn to exercise the option on his contract. There seems no chance of any sort of a reconciliation.

Another O'Neil Opus

"Strange Interlude" has made our Hollywood producers ambitious to go on with Eugene O'Neil's plays and books. Most of them have no place on the screen. Tiffany now steps forward to film "Auction in Souls," a story by Eugene O'Neil, not a play, mind you. Leila Hyams and Conrad Nagel have been engaged as the leads, an interesting combination since both have played together on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot in other pictures.

Helen Retire? Not Much

Reports have been current in Hollywood that Helen Twelvetrees will retire from the screen and return East. She has no intention apparently of leaving the screen and why should she? Motherhood has never been a drawback to any of our favorites. Miss Twelvetrees is talking contract with Carl Laemmle, Jr. Now and Yesterday went to Universal studios to have a test made for "Only Yesterday."

A Line or Two:

"The Keyhole" will have to do without George Brent for a few days. He is in bed with flu and his nurse, Ruth Chatterton, is seeing to it that he stays right there until he is well. Myrna Loy is another player who had to bow out of the picture and go home for a few days. "Topaze" is being held up pending her recovery. Marie Dressler is staying at La Quinta until the first of the year. Many of her pals have been driving down to see her and she is having a restful time during the holidays. Douglas Fairbanks is off on a skating tour of 24 hours. He will be back in time for the New Year's Eve party in Pickfair. Constance Talmadge Netcher is thinking of increasing the size of the plaster cast on her broken foot. She now has something like a hundred signatures on it.

Snapshots of Hollywood

Hollywood went social for the "Grang Guignol" opening and donned best bib and tucker. CHARLIE CHAPLIN in a front seat shivered at the horrors in company with PAULETTE GODDARD. VIRGINIA CHERRILL, all done up in a mink coat, was escorted by the very attentive CARY GRANT. EDGAR ALLAN WOOLF smilingly showed his pleasure at having the company of pretty MARY CARLISLE. JOHN CABOT LODGE with his attractive wife, FRANCESCA BRAGGIOTTI, came late with ANITA LOOS and JOHN EMERSON. BESS MEREDYTH, who has just had her option renewed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, sat next to the LIONEL ATWILLS. And, of course, MIKE CURTIZ. JANE MURFIN and her bridegroom, DONALD CRISP, who had staged some of the best plays, held a regular reception during intermission, also EVALYN BRENT and HARRY EDWARDS. HELEN HAYES, for all the world like a tiny white rabbit in ermine and gardenias, an interested onlooker with CHARLES MACARTHUR. EDWIN JUSTUS MAYER, who humorously compared the grewsome plays to option time, escorted MRS. LOUIS WEITZENKORN . That's all today.

Russian Composer Soloist in Unusual Symphony Concert

By MOSES SMITH

A program admirably balanced and performed with extraordinary beauty was given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra yesterday and will be repeated this evening at Symphony Hall. The novel item was Serge Prokofieff's new fifth piano concerto, performed yesterday, with the composer as pianist, for the first time in America. The other works were two Bach preludes arranged by Pick-Mangiagalli, the third symphony of Brahms, and Rimsky-Korsakov's "Spanish" Caprice.

The first of the Bach preludes was presented with the most sensitive and poetic interpretation; the second was a tribute to the virtuosity of the string section, especially the violins. The Brahms Symphony, least familiar of the master's four, has rarely, if ever, been heard in such full voice, in terms, alternately, so dramatic and lyrical. The performance was emotionally charged without doing violence to the music.

Any fear that after such music-making the new concerto would prove an anti-climax was quickly dispelled. For in five brief movements, Prokofieff has written music not only original (which is quite a feat nowadays) but also bearing the imprint of master hand. The themes have vitality and character; the moods of the various movements offer sufficient contrast, even while all are patently the work of a modern composer; and the technical development is masterly. The music is deliberately telegraphic; once the message is conveyed the movement is abruptly ended.

In contrast with the almost ironic manner of many of the pages is the lyrical music of the fourth movement, in which sentiment raises its head unabashed. The piano part is brilliantly written; never, however, in the by-gone virtuoso fashion. The new work was accorded a remarkable demonstration of applause yesterday, with the composer, conductor and orchestra sharing in the tribute.

The tour de force of Rimsky was treated in character by Dr. Koussevitzky and his men, to close a remarkable concert.

By HARRIS MORGAN

The return of "Strange Interlude" is an event, because of the superior quality of this motion picture. Acting, direction, and the much discussed O'Neill drama, combine to give the film appeal to lovers of the best in the cinema; so it is not surprising that the showing at Loew's State and Orpheum attracted throngs yesterday.

In this picture Norma Shearer is seen in her peak performance. And she has the most expert assistance—Ralph Morgan, as "Uncle Charlie," and Alexander Kirkland, as the husband, being the outstanding aids to the star. That novelty, the "asides," manipulated with vast cleverness on the sound screen, is beautifully brought out in the hands of skilled players; every word, and every tone counts, and, too, every gesture.

The story deals with the tragedy of a woman who finds she cannot have children because of a streak of insanity in her husband's family. Unwilling to rob her husband and herself of parental happiness, she hits upon a plan, involving the love of two other men and eventually bringing all four characters into the most difficult of dramatic complications.

The role of Nina Leeds in "Strange Interlude" is the most ambitious ever attempted by the talented Miss Shearer, both in the matter of psychological interpretation and acting power. The part also calls for an extraordinary feat in make-up, for the action of the plot covers some 30 years, requiring the star to appear first as a young girl, then as a middle-aged matron, and finally as an old woman.

Other features of the State and Orpheum bill for the week include Charley Chase's latest comedy, "Now We'll Tell One"; Mickey Mouse in "Mickey's Good Deeds," and Hearst Metrotone News.

Jill, Fear-Stricken, Listens as Murder Trial Opens in Crowded Court

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Starting life over again, Jill Mordant, beautiful, red-headed nurse in a hospital, is trying to make a home for her brother, Ray. He has been serving a five-year sentence in Michigan State Prison for a crime which "Black Leo" Lehman committed. Dr. John Slater, in love with Jill, and her other friends at the hospital, do not know about Ray. As Jill waits for her brother in the South Station, Parker Holden, well-known Boston attorney, is struck by her unusual beauty. He sees her meet Ted Merkle, an old friend of Ray's. Merkle promises Jill he will let Ray alone, and brother and sister spend their first day together. Jill is called to attend a victim of gangster shooting and recognizes Black Leo. The hospital payroll is stolen and an orderly killed. Jill is suspected of tipping off the gangsters. Holden takes her case and finds she is the girl he saw in the South Station. O'Shea hits on a clue to the robbery, but prolonged quizzing fails to get anything from Jill. Ray is wounded in the same fight. Merkle and his lawyer plot to defeat Holden's new plan as the day for the trial nears. Holden's fiancee accuses him of love for Jill. The trial starts.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

WHISPERINGS. Hundreds of eyes. Windy went first, then Slivers. Jill came last. In the doorway Jill hesitated an instant. Hundreds of people. Eyes, all staring greedily. People sitting on the window-sills. People in the witness box. Extra sets put in for the Judge's friends. Across the room were 12 empty chairs.

And on one side of a long table she saw O'Shea with McNabb. And the man with the bulldog jaw? He must be McGann. In her confusion Jill could not see Parker. Strayer was sitting across from O'Shea.

Somehow she got across the courtroom and sank into a chair indicated by the officers. The whispering went on, loud, so loud sometimes she could hear what they were saying.

She sat with head bowed, her hands locking and unlocking. How she wanted to see Holden. Then she realized it was he who was talking to McGann. And he was looking at her. There was a queer expression on his face. She tried to smile. Then he came over to her.

"Don't be afraid, dear," he murmured. "I'm going to sit right here ahead of you."

His voice was gentler than it had been since Friday when she had told him. She felt her eyeballs smart. She must not cry. She could see the blue sleeve of the officer sitting just back of her.

Jill felt easier now she had found Parker. She turned her head. Her heart stopped beating so suddenly she thought she was going to die. Her palms were wet with perspiration. The woman across the way was dressed in black with a heavy band of crepe on her arm. Beside her sat a boy and a girl.

"Mrs. Gaffney."

Jill bit her lips. She tried to turn her eyes away from the woman. The widow sat there, quiet and emotionless, like a nemesis. Jill closed her eyes for a moment to shut out the picture. She had tried not to think of poor Gaffney during these last weeks. Her mind had never bridged the gap to his wife. She used to see her come down to the hospital. On pay day. It must have been hard for them to get along. Three children they had. Probably the youngest was too small to bring to court. Gaffney had been so kind and hard working.

WANTED TO SCREAM

"I can't stand it." Jill wanted to stand up and scream. She would have to sit there—for days. Looking at Mrs. Gaffney and the children.

"I mustn't make a scene."

So to quiet her mind, Jill began on the alibi again. It was like saying the multiplication tables.

Outside the sun was shining, a perfect September day, not and beautiful. Jill wondered about Ray. She must watch for a chance to speak to Strayer when Holden was not near.

Silver and Windy were just ahead of her at the table. It was covered with brief cases, law books, papers.

"Hello," Reddy O'Shea said from across the table.

Jill did not turn her head. O'Shea grinned knowingly.

Holden, sitting in front of Jill, was still not fully recovered from the shock of seeing his client as she was today. He had known she was lovely, but he had not imagined she had such distinction. He'd have risked her in any drawing room in the world.

"She has real 'class.' Real 'style.'" Holden ruminated as he thumbed over the jury lists in his hand. He felt more secure. Jill's appearance was her best asset. In the tilt of her head, the swirl of her hair, the droop of her heavy lashes, he felt a jury must read "not guilty." If her beauty did not act as a boomerang. The jury might well believe such a girl could hold the interest of a man like Merkle. Even if he were a man like Merkle. Even if he were a "big shot."

The judge came in. Everybody stood up.

"The people of the State of New York vs. Albert Rasche, Anthony Decido and Jill Mordant for the murder of William Gaffney," drawled the clerk.

Little metal tubes out of a glass box. Men, women that were to judge her. The name of the first juryman was read. The wheels of the law had started to move.

A fight over each juror. Plain to see Strayer was afraid of the women on the panel. He shied away from them. Holden did not agree. He felt a woman or two, maybe more, might help.

"She's too good-looking. You don't want any women on that jury, I tell you," Strayer murmured in Holden's ear. "I know what I'm doing. Never trust a woman."

Strayer and Holden in conference.

Talking, buzzing. The outside doors were opened to let in what breeze there was.

"How's it going?"

He looked into Jill's terrified gray eyes and saw how she was trembling.

"Be a game little girl," he whispered. "What is it, dear?"

"Mrs. Gaffney! It's killing me."

Holden tried to say comforting words but he could think of none.

"Whatever you believe of me, don't believe that."

Holden leaned nearer.

"I love you, dear. That's my answer."

It was afternoon on the third day when the jury was finally selected. Despite Strayer's efforts, there were two women among the twelve.

Mrs. Gaffney was there again. This time the children were not with her. Jill did not look her way today.

When noon recess came Holden turned to Jill.

"I've ordered lunch sent in," he said. "The matron says you're not eating. We can't have that."

He went away to consult with Judge Grant. Jill's eyes sought Strayer's. He came over to her quickly.

"He's all right," Strayer murmured.

"I'm afraid. If he finds out about this trouble, he'll come."

"Don't worry. We're seeing to it he doesn't know. You better write him a letter when you get back to the jail. I'll come and get it. He is restive because he doesn't hear."

Holden was coming back.

"What was he saying to you?"

"Just asking me how I felt."

"No, he wasn't. I know by the expression in your eyes. What did he tell you?"

Jim was silent.

"Shall I ask him?"

"No."

"Then tell me."

Jill's eyes were pleading.

"Trust me, Parker."

GAVE WARNING

The court officer came to tell Holden, Jill must remain in the building and have her lunch.

Holden was about to leave her when he stopped for a warning.

"McGann will make his opening statement this afternoon," he said. "It's going to be tough to take, little girl. Remember all the things I've told you and don't let it upset you. That's why I want you to have a decent lunch."

A matron from the jail stayed with Jill. When the luncheon came it was served for both of them and from an excellent German restaurant down the street. Jill tried to do as she was ordered. It was the first tasty food she had eaten in many weeks. The soup was piping hot and the coffee was perfect.

He came at last, a white carnation in his buttonhole, smiling, handsome. Jill's heart seemed to melt. She sought his eyes with pathetic eagerness.

"How did lunch go?" he asked. "You look better."

"It was so nice," she said humbly. "How can I thank you?"

"By being a good, brave girl this afternoon."

Later Jill was to understand what Holden meant. McGann, rough-voiced, keen of mind, stood up. The opening guns of the prosecution began firing. It was hand-to-hand warfare that this battling prosecutor used. No barrage, no smoke screen. Right out in the open.

"Ladies and gentlemen of the jury——" Jill settled herself in the chair to listen. For a time she did not pay much attention. His statements were general. Then it began.

"I will prove to you that this girl," pointing to Jill, "using her beauty and her youth, helped these men frame their holdup plans. I shall prove to you, beyond a reasonable doubt, that for four weeks preceding the shooting she lived with these other two defendants in an apartment on Wayne st., while the police department of the city of Boston hunted for her. I shall prove that, while there, she nursed one of the men of the gang, a man shot when the Merkle crowd cut down Black Leo Lehman in the street. I shall prove to you that she walked out of the hospital after seeing Black Leo Lehman die, and went directly to Merkit to get her orders."

Somehow Jill had not expected this. The pointed finger. The eyes of the 12 jurymen.

"I must sit here quietly!" Her hands were locked together in her lap. She scarcely seemed to breathe. Holden's eyes were a blank. Strayer appeared indifferent. Slivers and Windy were nonchalant.

VOICE WENT ON

"I will prove that after the Black Leo shooting this woman, holding a responsible post in our city's biggest hospital, left the nurses' home, purchased bandages and other medical supplies at a place uptown and went directly into hiding to nurse the wounded man. I will further prove that the man she nursed is Ted Merkle, missing since the night of the shooting."

"I will prove that an iceman delivering ice to the apartment saw this girl getting clean bed linen out of a linen closet when he came to deliver ice. That he noted her beauty and wondered what she was doing there."

"I will show that when the Merkle crowd was hard-up for money this girl telephoned Bellevue Hospital to ascertain the change in payday."

"I will, furthermore, prove that she even went so far as to come downtown to the hospital to be sure the holdup was executed before she disappeared. I will prove that to Merkle's gang she was known as 'Rusty,' the name on Leo Lehman's lips when he died. When this girl saw Lehman's bullet-ridden body lying there before her she knew whose hand fired the shots that ended his life."

The courtroom was deathly quiet. Jill looked straight ahead of her now. There was blank terror in her heart.

"But I must sit here as though I did not hear him."

Then McGann went on to the moment when Silvers and Windy shot down poor old Gaffney. Mrs. Gaffney was crying quietly into her black-bordered handkerchief.

"We'll adjourn until tomorrow morning at 9:30 o'clock."

Will Jill Mordant be able to stand the strain of the trial and the accusations of the bulldog prosecuting attorney? Intense interest holds the courtroom. Many thrills are to come. Be sure and order your copy of this paper in advance.

Vaudeville and Films for Midnight Program

The Capitol in Allston will stage a New Year midnight show for tomorrow. In addition to eight vaudeville acts, Joe E. Brown's laugh riot, "You Said a Mouthful," will be shown. To round out a gala program, Henry Kalis and the Met stage band will fill the orchestra pit. Manager Maurice Corkery states that this will be the biggest bill the theater has ever presented. The feature photoplay is highly amusing, with Brown at his funniest in a finely directed comedy.

Mr. and Mrs. Greene will be at home at 15 Brewster ter., Brookline, after Feb. 15.

Deflated Ushers New Hope for 1933

By GILBERT SELDES

There must be large sections of the country in which it is not important to know that theater ushers in New York have been demoted from the rank of High Admiral to that of ensign. This is one of the things out of which New Yorkers get pleasure and in which they see a sign of the times—a little deflation of the lushness which got to be an absurdity a few years ago. It is not likely that the money spent on gold braid was the direct cause of the Wall Street crash, but hundreds of thousands of people did go to moving picture theaters and most of them cowered a little when they were accompanied, politely but firmly, to seats which they did not want, but which the ushers wanted them to occupy. Perhaps we were so intimidated that we lost our nerve, or so impressed that we decided to give up the unequal struggle for riches and flung whatever we possessed into wild speculation. The psychology of nations is a queer thing, and the thoughts and tastes of directors of moving picture cathedrals are queerer still.

Gilbert Seldes

It is fitting that the man who reduced ushers nearly to the level of human beings should be Roxy, the man who first raised them above our miserable species. I was charmed to note, also, that in all the superlatives showered (by the press agents and the public) on the new Radio City Music Hall the word "cathedral" did not occur. To my mind the combination of music hall and movie entertainment with the overtones of religion was not a happy one; the new building is a superb theater, which is better than being an imitation of anything else.

It is, to my mind, a successful blending of simplicity and richness. For generations theaters have chosen to be one thing or the other; extravagantly plush and gold, or cold and solemn with stucco walls, and for decorations "a little something against a background of nothing." Propelled to magnificence by Roxy, modulated into simplicity by Donald Deskey, the new theater is a gratification to the eye.

The first reviewers of the actual entertainment were more enthusiastic about the theater than about the events on the stage. The act which gave me the greatest pleasure was the comedy dancing of Ray Bolger, a one-man event which could have taken place in a room no bigger than a row of telephone booths; it is real vaudeville. But there is something to be said for size; 60 or 80 ballet girls, when they are excellent, give a pleasure which 20 cannot give—or rather, they add an agreeable excitement to the original, small-scale pleasure.

It is reported that Roxy believes the theater is done for, if people do not like what he gives them, at the price. The theater is never done for until all the people in the theater throw up their hands. But Roxy need not fear.

The New English Weekly backs a monetary policy unfamiliar in America and not likely to be accepted with enthusiasm by most people who have money; but it combines with this a policy of economic nationalism — each country developing and supporting itself to the highest possible degree, which is much more than a straw in the wind. The editors not only know America well but are friendly; their nationalism in no way implies hostility to others.

America, they say, can be much nearer immediate self-sufficiency than Great Britain. "The economic resources of the United States—contained, as it were, under her own hat—are already sufficient for 98 per cent of her most extravagant needs; and of the remaining 2 per cent there is not the smallest doubt that, given the urgency, her resourceful inventors could supply the deficiency in a few weeks." That is the premise, and here is the prophecy:

"Any competent quartermaster-general, in fact, with the resources of America to play with and the present population to consider, could raise the general standard of living in America not only to the level of the standard of 1928-29 but as much above it as that level is above the existing standard."

The method urged by the New English Weekly is the distribution of purchasing tokens, National Dividends, and the scientific control of retail prices. It is extremely radical and implies that nothing can be done with the old system. But the facts about our self-sufficiency are independent of the financial plan. The editors believe that "the world-market for 'surplus' production is going, going, gone." If they are right, the fact that America can live by itself is going to be extremely important to us.

Latest Notes of Fashionables

By DOROTHY WHIPPLE FRY

EVERYONE IS MAKING New Year resolutions! Generally the New Year resolution is just a formality, but this year there is a great deal to be achieved by carried out resolutions. Miss Lois Mareau is making all sorts of resolutions. She is laughing about them but we'll have a wager there are a few she will actually keep. She is a charming young debutante of this season.

We saw her the other day looking most enchanting in her silver muskrat fur coat with the big, cosy-looking fur collar way up about her ears, and a smart felt hat of brown and tan that tilts up just far enough to show her modish coiffure underneath. She wore a neat brown woolen frock with a wide white satin collar, and that lovely New Year smile of hers is perfectly enchanting. Miss Lois Mareau is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Parker Mareau of Cambridge.

THEN THERE IS ATTRACTIVE Miss Leslie Blake, who made her debut last season, but we might add she has not forgotten how to have a good time. We saw her the other day on a shopping expedition with an armful of bundles and a holiday smile that was really a joy to see. She wore a smart green broadcloth coat with a fluffy fur collar of tan and a hat perched roguishly on the back of her head, with a bow on the side, and her curly brown hair all ablow about her face. She is very busy with plans for the Vincent Club play. Miss Blake is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Blake of Dedham.

Then there is Miss Katharine Talbot, who is an active member of the Junior League. She looked attractive the other morning at Zero Marlborough st., in a strikingfrock of red Crepe with white polka dots on the full and modish sleeves and a very becoming white collar and cuffs. She looked particularly well in a turban hat that showed her golden brown hair about the edges in a very alluring manner. She is one young lady who definitely earned her holiday gladness for she gave untiringly of her time before Christmas preparing gifts for the Family Welfare Society in which the Junior League interests itself each season and supplies many gifts for needy families.

Pretty little Miss Shirley Swain is flitting hither and yon these days doing a round of debutante parties! She looked like a model for a Nell Brinkley drawing with her fluffy golden hair and that odd and charming color combination of light hair and dark lashes that is so striking. She was driving her car the other morning looking altogether charming in a brown ensemble with one of those adorable gay go capes of brown and a cunning hat perched on her golden fluffy hair.

Coat of Half Fur, Half Fabric Wins in Favor for the Winter

By CABLE FROM PARIS BUREAU

Paris, Dec. 30—

The coat that is half fur, half fabric is one of the midwinter favorites in Paris this year. It is a clever combination of the dress-up afternoon and the all-around utility topcoat—a single wrap that serves the duties of two.

Paris dressmakers have given a good deal of thought to the designing of this type of coat. In keeping with the time, they have adroitly managed to plan the placing of the fur in such a way that it will receive the minimum of hard wear, while wrists, collar near the throat, hems and back have been reserved for fabric which is more easily replaced.

One of the most attractive of these models is the Bruyere coat listed as "Joan." It is a coat which adapts itself to practically any type of figure, with sleeves that widen to immense arm-eyes and soften the lines from waist to shoulder. The collar of the coat fabric is done in the scarf manner and may be wrapped twice around the throat or tied in a huge bow under one's chin.

The sketch shows this Bruyere coat worn with one of her little velvet bellhop hats. The material is just stiff enough, to hold a definite shape, yet fall softly into a slight fold at one side. A black and white feather is posed at the center front and tilted sharply to one side.

The other hat in the sketch, done by Marceyle, is of felt, and though worn at a more conservative angle, it gives a tilted effect by means of a draped and twisted felt brim. The entire hat is of felt in a brilliant bright blue that goes well with black or navy.

Books---And a Number of Things

By CHARLES HANSON TOWNE

A certain romantic glamour has gone out of the theater. You may laugh all you wish at the thought of what used to be called "stage Johnnies" waiting anxiously outside mean little doors in dingy alleys for a glimpse of their adored star; but they gave color to life in the theater, and for that reason alone they are not to be despised.

I often think that the actresses of today must miss this anonymous adoration. Many of them are old enough to remember the time when queues formed at the stage door, and they passed through a lane of admiring faces as they stepped into their waiting cab. But the younger actresses of today have no such memories.

* * *

I can recall how the beautiful Lillian Russell always had a bevy of girls and young men awaiting her exit from that mysterious realm beyond the footlights, and how she beamed at them while they drank in her loveliness, which lost nothing on close inspection.

And there was pert little Della Fox, who played so long with De Wolf Hopper. She had a blonde prettiness which could not be called beauty. She sang badly, in a rather husky voice—in fact, she almost spoke her songs.

"A shady nook, a babbling brook,
A Moon so soft and mellow," and hear the ecstatic sighs that came from the auditorium. Della Fox had personality, glamour, charm—"it," in the vernacular of today.

She brought into fashion the "Della Fox dip"—a curl that drooped down on the forehead, and every shopgirl in town imitated it as best she could. None, however, could wear it with quite the same saucy pride as she.

Those were the days when the foyers of our theaters were filled with flowers sent by the Johnnies to their beloved favorites. "Where there's a Willy, there's a way" was the wisecrack of the hour. "Mash" notes were handed in by ancient doormen, harmless love letters that brought smiles, undoubtedly, to the lips of the stars because they were not taken too seriously.

* * *

Lulu Glaser, who sang with Francis Wilson, was another great favorite of her day. Later, when she starred alone, she made a success in "Dolly Varden," and had hosts of admirers. So, too, did the petite Edna Wallace Hopper, whose voice you now hear over the radio—the same magnetic voice we all heard years ago in the light operas of Sousa, and particularly in "Florodora."

Long before that time we had Marie Tempest in "The Fencing Master," gorgeous in black tights, lithe as a panther, and singing beautifully. Today she is still adored in London, and is one of the world's most finished comediennes.

Edna May was another girl who took our town by storm. So did Virginia Earle, at the old Daly's, and the exquisite Minnie Ashley, whose career in musical comedy lasted all too brief a time. And one can never forget sprightly Christie Macdonald, with an Irish beauty that captivated us all.

Our motion picture actresses, young and lovely as they are, know nothing of those one-time pleasant relationships between stars and their following. Except, of course, when they occasionally appear "in person" along Broadway.

They must miss direct audiences, and they must feel a little lonely, speaking their lines only for the benefit of directors and cameramen and the few privileged persons who are allowed on the Hollywood sets.

Applause—they never hear it; but its lack may be atoned for when they receive their pay envelopes. And yet.

Mistletoe Miseries

I didn't know she'd take it so
Or else I'd not have dared;
Although the bliss was worth the blow
I didn't know she'd take it so.
(She stood beneath the mistletoe
So long, I thought she cared).
I didn't know she'd take it so,
Or else I'd not have dared!

Rushin' the Gals!

Wellesley's Marion Herrmann is being pursued a-plenty by that University of Pennsylvania football star, "Mel" Hemeon of Newton, since he came home for the holidaying, and we're wondering how she will while away her spare time when he has to go back to the intellectual grinding . . . Won't Helen Madden of Newton have a grand time of it throwing a surprise party for her mother on her Silver Anniversary . . . On that same day her brother will celebrate his 24th birthday . . . A very celebratey holiday season for the Maddens! . . . It's "Back Togethe, Again" for Mary Phiney and Gene McCarthy of Framingham 'cause they "Just Couldn't Say Good-Bye" . . . Boston's Carmela Hillier, formerly of Detroit, will certainly be happy-hearted to wear that gorgeous diamond ring that her boy friend toted to her all the way from the Golden (and diamondy) West . . . Was Mary Healey of Dorchester all surprised when she received A Hope Chest for Christmas? . . . Wonder how soon she will start stuffing it? . . .

Cupid Hits Again

You'll be seeing Atty. Mack "Smiling" Saxe en route to the altar-joining with Revere's pretty Anne Novins, if he continues the rushing as vigorously as he has up to the present writing . . . We're voting Gus Gannon of Station I to be the best-garbed cop on the force . . . When Gus steps out with the Missus, he bravely sports a pair of pearlish-gray spats, a walking stick, and, to top it all, a speckless "iron" hat . . . And he doesn't smoke what-the-country-needs cigars, either! . . . We're wondering why pretty Miss Christy of Allston is so fascinated by the hockey games at Boston Garden? Could it be that most of her looks of interest are focussed on one certain Bruin? . . . We'll find out soon, if our snoopery-talents don't desert us . . . And why, oh why, is Atty. Si Cohn so indifferent to the Mona-Lisa-like charm of Newton's Sarah Kaplan? . . . It's hard to imagine, but said to be so, that Charlestown's Eddie Connelly, with his million-dollar smile, is girl-shy! Eddie is a B. C. and Harvard Law School graduate, now practising . . .

Gossipy Bits

The height of embarrassment has been reached at last! . . . A certain young local Adonis scaled that height just the other night . . . He called his beloved by phone and told her it would be utterly impossible for him to keep the date he'd made with her for that evening . . . An important business engagement that had come up suddenly, he explained . . . His sweetheart was particularly gracious in excusing him from seeing her . . . He thought nothing at the time of her pleasant manner in releasing him from the date . . . But later—however, we're getting ahead of our story . . . After freeing himself from his tryst with his regular lady love, he went out very gay to meet a male friend of his, and the pair of them hastened to the lobby of the Hotel Manger, where the friend had arranged a "blind date" with two girls whom he described as "real babes" . . . When the young Adonis found that one of the "real babes" was his betrothed, you can picture his embarrassment . . . But don't forget hers—which matched his blush for blush! . . .

A Lover of Art

Major Ernest Lee sent out his Christmas greetings in the form of a reproduction of Rembrandt's "Mother Manook Van Rijn," the artistic piece of work having been printed in Holland . . . One local [illegible] one recently fell so in love with the voice of an unknown youth who phoned her that the two of them chatted over the wires for an hour and 45 minutes! . . . And it was a long distance conversing at that! . . . Who says there's no more romance in young hearts?

Caught

"Lu" Brown, singer at the Deauville Club, is what you might call a Real Helpful Type of Girl . . . What else could you call it, when "Lu" was seen helping that South Boston chap crank his car on one of the cold nights? . . . That very attractive Evelyn Lundstedt of Lynn is quite that way over Al Vaughn and it's very reciprocal! . . . Sam Ross of WBZ gets wholehearted enjoyment out of telling how he got in at the Roxy Music Hall opening when even his bosses were unable to buy a ticket (at box-office prices, does that mean? Or were they willing to pay that $50) . . . You will find Dr. and Mrs. Lew McPhee, John and Cathleen O'Neil of Newton, Charlie Linehan of West Roxbury, Ray Brady of the Ritz Carlton, and Peggy Lanigan of the Phi Mu House of Emerson College (with many more) good-bying the old year tonight at the Edward Maddens' house-party

Sleepless Nights!

The reason why Brookline's Joe Williams is caught sleeping in the daytime is because he is Mrs. Williams' alternate in preparing bottles for the twin babes who provide his household's musical theme . . . A new addition to the Phil Smiths' household came in the form of a son, David, on December 10 . . .

Meyers Guides Show to Top Honors

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

In these days of fretful artistic competition on both stage and screen, the seeker for entertainment may, with some purpose, wonder whether picture houses are temples of cinema or arenas where acrobats and other lively specimens of variety hold forth. And this, too, brings up the question of a gentleman known to the trade as master of ceremonies. Wherever the flickering film is mingled with stage shows, and an augmented orchestra grinds out soothing tunes, you can hardly escape the master of ceremonies.

* * *

It may be presumed that if you asked Stan Meyers of the RKO Boston to explain the exact uses of a master of ceremonies, he would hotly reply that no show is complete without one. In fact, he did tell me that very thing—and then insisted upon repeating it. In the meantime, the playhouse had gone picturewise and was screening for the first time in these parts a film called "Uptown New York." It was a lull in the program for Mr. Meyers, who had already done three Friday shows and was catching his breath for the fourth. Mr. Meyers is very young; he is also pleasantly agreeable, besides being something of an artist when permitted to fondle his B-flat saxophone. For himself, he claims no greater distinction than to serve his employers as a band master. But he does run the stage show. He lays out its routine, perspires freely at rehearsals, and finally takes the entire program to the stage in his own manner.

Stan Meyers

Even with pictures, insists Mr. Meyers, the master of ceremonies is an essential part of any well balanced program. He may, to the casual observer, be merely someone on the stage swinging a baton and exchanging chatty remarks with vaudeville performers, but to Mr. Meyers he is the mainspring of the performance. Any good picture, he will tell you, can take good care of itself; but not a vaudeville bill. While not totally converted to Mr. Meyers's notions, it is only fair to acknowledge the precision and grace with which his own demonstrations as a master of ceremonies are embellished.

"Land of Smiles" at the Shubert. (Second week.) Charles Hackett steps out of grand opera and lifts a lusty voice in the interest of Sino-Caucasion romance. The last week.

"The Sign of the Cross" (film) at the Majestic. Lavish motion picture based upon the martyrdom of Christians at Rome in Nero's gay and frivolous days.

There is a suggestion in this scene from "Councillor-at-Law" that Sue Moore is more than inclined to accept an insidious proposal from Paul Muni. The play will be seen at the Shubert on Jan. 9.

LOVE DRAMA OF DISTINCTION

"A Farewell to Arms" Reveals Helen Hayes at Her Best

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Helen Hayes and Frank Borzage turn "A Farewell to Arms" into a screen love drama of great distinction. Borzage works the camera magic into a wondrous background for acting of the first rank by the star; their joint effort give Ernest Hemingway's novel a far better break than the movies have accorded the bulk of fiction, and "A Farewell to Arms" is made at once an imaginative panorama of lights and shadows, and a vehicle of gloriously good performance by Miss Hayes.

Borzage is one of the best of American directors, just as Miss Hayes has quickly become filmland's leading actress. That the two would infuse the breath of life into Hemingway's word painting, was a foregone conclusion; Borzage with his play of lenses, suggesting here, putting the golden touch there, swinging along for periods in silver silence, the voiceless vistas eloquently speaking; Miss Hayes throwing herself into the role of the nurse, giving her warmth, sweeping her through the emotional grade, holding the eye, the ear, and the heart from the start to her last word in the arms of death.

The novel is far from being ideal material for the cinema. For one thing, it is not a story of action; its shadings are such as would ordinarily tend to render the celluloid slow in development of interest. It is more on the order of film narrative.

This is not Miss Hayes' best role, but it is of the highest quality, and in the last 15 minutes she is at the crest of her art.

"A Farewell to Arms" is an ace love tale of the films. Of the males Adolphe Menjou is an easy best, while Gary Cooper begins poorly but finishes most creditably. The film could have been vastly strengthened by another choice for the lover, say Fredric March. But Helen Hayes is sufficient in herself to make this movie, from the acting standpoint, a rare delight.

On stage the Met makes its show a three-part affair. Mr. Sevitzky officiates with the orchestra through the first, "The Spirit of the Waltz"; the orchestra continues playing for the other two, "The Cocktail Party" and "Esprit de Militaire." Each section has much dancing by the ensemble, with comedy and song and other specialties interlarded. Among the stars are The Radio Rogues, Bobby Bixler, Miriam Lax, William Royal and Jacque, Irene and Ellen.

I Hereby Resolve for 1933...

Not to lose my temper with the boy friend

To take my mother to the movies once a week.

To read one book a week.

To develop poise

To weigh myself once a week to keep tabs on my health.

To relegate suspicion to the discard

To be happy and gay and think only of the future.

To remember all my resolutions that I be easier to get along with and a more charming person to myself as well as others.

This Is Resolution Day——Dec. 31, 1932

Have you made your resolutions for 1933? It's time to get them formulated. If you have made them—it's time to plan toward keeping them—toward a better 1934—for you. Miss Mary Connell, West Roxbury, has been "sworn" before the "New Year's Resolution Committee." Note her resolves. (Boston American Photo.)

CLOSING TONE BARELY STEADY FOR LEADERS

New York, Dec. 31—The closing tone was barely steady for leading issues on the New York Stock Exchange today. Prices held to a fairly even plane in the stock market as Wall Street turned its back on 1932.

It was a typical pre-holiday session, with trading light and price changes largely negligible. It was notable that the advances of the two preceding sessions were fairly well maintained, and a few issues, notably New York Central and some of the coppers crept fractionally higher for a time.

SALES FOR CASH

There were numerous fractional recessions at the finish, however, and some of a point or so. The turnover for the two-hour session approximated 450,000 shares. Again, numerous transactions for cash appeared on the tape, indicating last-minute sales to establishes losses for income tax purposes.

The bond market closed the books of 1932 today with little or no enthusiasm but with prices holding steady to firm.

Most of the highest grade liens held up around their year's highest levels while the majority of secondary issues mulled about, for the most part, in a rather narrow range.

United States Government obligations were fractionally firmer. Improvement was shown by some loans of Germany, Belgium, France and Italy.

In the shares market prices held steady until the final few minutes of trading, when renewed weakness of tobaccos spread to other sections of the list, and several issues closed with losses of a point or more. Net gains outnumbered losses for the market as a whole, 232 issues closing up and 139 off, with 164 unchanged.

COPPERS CLOSE STEADY

Among issues off a point or so were Reynolds B, Atchison, American Can, Allied Chemical, American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Case and a few others. Fractional losses embraced American Tobacco B, U. S. Steel, United Aircraft, International Harvester and others.

Coca Cola pushed up a point, and coppers, firm in the earlier trading, closed about steady. Further buying appeared in New York Central, but that issue finished barely changed. Texas Corp. stiffened in the final dealings and finished with a gain of a major fraction.

The last minute selling evidently reflected profit-taking on the advance of the past two days, but it failed to cut seriously into the gains.

Week-end business news was meager. The freight carloadings' report for last week will be delayed until next Tuesday. Reports from the steel industry generally anticipated some pickup in ingot output next week, as some mills resume after the holiday shutdowns.

Year end surveys indicated that some lines entered the new year with a substantial amount of business either contracted or in prospect, notably textiles, shoes and chemicals. Continued firmness of the coppers reflected rumors of pending orders, but no price increase to a level at which producers could show a profit was anticipated.

Stock market sentiment in Wall Street at the turn of the year was rather mixed. Bullishly inclined traders spoke of January resumptions in steel and other lines, while other quarters were inclined to stress possible adverse affects of fourth quarter earnings statements, possible corporate reorganizations and political uncertainties.

It was generally acknowledged, however, that the financial situation was decidedly stronger than a year ago. Bank closings in December, as tabulated by the American Banker, were only 105 in number, or less than a third of 353 in December of 1931.

Foreign exchanges were marked by a sharp rebound in sterling, which had been under pressure during the past few days. Cables ruled about 2 cents higher, at $3.33. The French franc dipped slightly. Several of the commodity markets were closed, including cotton.

November's Motor Vehicle Output Up

November production of motor vehicles showed a gain of 18 per cent over the preceding months, according to a report made at the directors' meeting of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

The report showed an estimated production for the industry of 61,216 units.

The output was 12.8 per cent under that for the corresponding month a year ago. Production for the year to date was estimated at 1,323,652 units or 43.6 per cent under last year's production for the same period.

Last 10 Issues Traded in Year

The last 10 issues to be traded on the New York Stock Exchange in 1932 were, in the order named: General Mills preferred, General Printing Ink, National Lead preferred B, Otis Steel preferred, Shell Union Oil, Hershey Chocolate, Standard Oil of California, Missouri, Kansas & Texas, Mack Truck and Continental Oil.

May Grant War Powers for Speedy Action

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

New York, Dec. 31—Col. Malcolm C. Rorty, former vice-president of the International Telephone & Telegraph Company, chatting with me, indicated that business was badly deadlocked, and that political bodies would not have the patience to wait for slow, gradual recovery.

He thought that it might be necessary to grant war powers to President-elect Roosevelt after he takes office in order to galvanize action against the depression. He also indicated that some variation of a moratorium on farm debt might be desirable.

He thinks business needs an artificial stimulant and he proposes that the government give a bounty to private interests which will undertake construction projects.

Obsolete and unwarranted bookkeeping methods exaggerate the deficit of the federal government, according to Dr. Isador Lubin, of the Brookings Institution at Washington.

If the government followed the normal accounting practices of private corporations, the deficit for the fiscal year ended last June would have been reduced from $2,885,000,000 to $1,200,000,000, he said.

In the field of banking, Harold Reed, Cornell economist, suggested that the Federal Reserve System be used as an instrument of economic planning and stabilization.

To Centralize Trading for 2500 Security Dealers

Announcement is made of the formation of Allied-Distributors, Inc., organized for the purpose of centralizing the trading activities of approximately 2500 securities dealers located in virtually all cities of the United States having a population of 20,000 or more, and with representatives in foreign countries. The new corporation constitutes a consolidation of the trading units of Allied General Corporation and Distributors Group, Inc., each of which will hold 50 per cent of its capital stock.

Formation of this new unit will in no way affect the securities distributing activities of either of the two sponsoring organizations, one of which, Allied General Corp., is an important unit in the general securities business and in the management investment trust field as sponsor and distributor of this type of security, and the other of which, Distributors Group, Inc., is sponsor and distributor of North American Trust shares, the largest of the unit-type trusts, and of North American Bond Trust certificates.

Kenneth S. Gaston, executive vice-president of Allied General Corp., will be president of Allied-Distributors, Inc.; John Sherman Myers, vice-president of Distributors Group, Inc., will be executive vice-president, and Brooke L. Wynkoop will be vice-president and general manager.

Attacks Tax Discrimination

> "Taxes should, of course, be kept as moderate as possible," he said, "but of far greater importance is that they should be equitably distributed. The oil industry affords the perfect example of unfortunate results of maldistribution. If Congress and the legislatures will find means of removing the discrimination in tax imposition, they will do much toward opening the way to better business and better times."

Loree-Central Rumor Denied

New York, Dec. 31.—A report that Leonor F. Loree, president of Delaware & Hudson Co., might become director of New York Central at annual meeting met with strong denial by interests closely associated with him.

Carloadings Report Tuesday

Carloadings report of the American Railway Association covering loadings of revenue freight for the week ended December 24 will be announced Tuesday, January 3.

Delay in receipt of reports from various roads, due to the Christmas holidays, was assigned as the cause for the delayed announcement.

Artificial Lifting of Prices Hit

By LEWIS HANEY

(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, Dec. 31—Two news items yesterday caught my attention. One was headed, "Kansas Professor Scores Monopolies." The other bore the caption, "Farm Leaders Take New Tack."

If these items are signs of the times they are most significant. They may indicate a return to straight economic thinking.

* * *

The Kansas professor strikes a lusty blow at all monopoly and artificial price maintenance. He says that monopoly is what has been keeping the price system of business control from working.

Nor does he hesitate to give cases. He says that steel manufacturers, by keeping their prices up out of line with the general level, while operating at less than 15 per cent of capacity, are restraining trade. And he asks why utility rates should be kept up when the other living costs have come down.

It is my firm conviction that the chief reason why we have had so much over-production and so much inability to sell things, is that producers have tried to keep prices up and thus violate the law of supply and demand. How can you expect the price system to work if you don't allow prices to be determined by market forces?

Surely we can see that if we allow business men to "restrain trade" trading will be restrained!

The good old-fashioned way to sell things is to price them right. The automobile producers are learning that lesson. Those who cannot stand the pace will drop out. The others will make money and sell more cars.

* * *

Apparently some farm leaders are seeing the light. We are told that they are abandoning the futile efforts to raise prices by artificial means, and are seeking the best means of adjusting themselves to changed conditions.

One of their proposals is that arbitration boards be established to bring creditors and debtors together for the purpose of arriving at the best possible terms for a workable settlement. Creditors must realize that in many cases it has become impossible for debtors to pay, at least in full. Debtors must realize that their debts are valid claims and agree to do the best they can.

Land values must be scaled down where necessary, and mortgages reduced proportionally. Then easier terms, on a definite and practicable basis, can be established.

This is the sensible way out, both as to foreign debts and domestic debts.

* * *

All along the line, budgets must be balanced—federal, state, town, corporation, individual. Then credit will be liquid, the existing buying power will be released, business can expand and money circulate.

With expenses down, efficient business men could make money. With capital values down, a smaller income would yield a good percentage on investment values. With cost of living down, lower money wages would allow a similar standard of living.

LIVE NEWS OF LEADERS

FINAL session of 1932 registered a good score numerically. Net gains were registered for 232 issues, 139 showed declines and 161 finished unchanged. Continental Oil was the last issue to appear on the ticker tape.

Tobaccos Yield to Liquidation

Special weakness in the tobacco group sprang from reports that the oft-rumored cut in cigarette prices would be announced shortly. Because only a small volume of cash transactions accompanied the rather severe decline in the group, the street described the selling as outright liquidation by interests possessing knowledge of what is coming. One report said the change would reduce the wholesale price of the popular cigarettes from $6.85 to $6 per 1000.

Rumors Predict 10-Cent Package

Still another suggested a straight cut to a 10-cent retail package would be made to meet competition. The street took the view that if the price cut is made discounts may be reduced which would limit the effectiveness of the step as a counter-action against the cheaper brands of cigarettes.

Trusts Call in Borrowed Stock

Calling in on borrowed stock by several investment trusts is said to have prompted part of the recent short covering.

Beth. Preferred vs. Steel Common

With Bethlehem Steel preferred and U. S. Steel common selling at approximately the same prices, comparison of their respective status would seem of timely interest. Basing price levels solely on dividend prospects gives the first named a considerable edge over the other especially if directors of the Steel Corp. vote a change in the preferred dividend at the next meeting. Such an event would further delay resumption of junior payments. There are about $147,000,000 capital obligations ahead of Bethlehem preferred and approximately $480,000,000 ahead of Steel common. Steel's preferred dividend calls for nearly four times the sum required annually for Bethlehem to pay fixed charges.

Pools Reported Ready for Action

Dairy Products Earning $2 Share

Earnings of National Dairy Products for the year now ending will approximately cover the $2 annual dividend rate, after liberal reserves, according to reliable estimates. The 1933 outlook however is said to be clouded by an uncertain price situation. Sources close to the management anticipate further economies will be instituted in the new year for the purpose of maintaining a strong cash position. Cash account at present is figured around $20,000,000.

SPECTATOR

Says:

Wall Street will bid 1932 goodbye with relief today, and may continue the festive mood displayed yesterday. Precedent says there is normally a relapse after the New Year holidays; so it would be just as well to watch the proceedings today and see what happens next week.

Tax Collections

The big volume of cash sales indicates selling for tax purposes must have made a huge percentage of the transactions of the week.

Furthermore it suggests Uncle Sam's income tax collections may be even leaner than anticipated.

One interesting item is that steel companies, assuming operations at 20 per cent of capacity, can cut costs $9 a ton if enough business comes in to lift production to the 30 per cent level . . . This is an important factor as a general principle and would make quite a change in earnings next year.

Chemical Shares

Allied Chemical is ending the year in an enviable position compared with other leading stocks for it is only a few points from its 1932 high . . . Its strength is attributed to a combination of factors with a large short interest helping . . . The belief that the chemical industry will be among the first out of the depression is bringing some buying.

Union Carbide, one of the favorite chemical stocks, is the lowest cost producer of alcohol, which it secures as a by-product, we are told.

U. S. Alcohol's 1932 earnings are being revised downward to between $1 and $1.50 a share. Earlier estimates were better than $2.

Hide Sales Fair at Steady Prices

Chicago packers are reported to be holding back offerings of any general line of hides, yet fair sales have been made the past week at firm prices on a basis of 4½ cents for light native cows. The hide situation is regarded as being in excellent shape, with tanners for the most part not well supplied, and spring shoe business near at hand. Demand for country hides has picked up in the last few days and the market is stronger.

Road Recalling 1500 Workers for 10 Days

Beginning January 9, Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway will re-employ for 10 days a total of 1500 men in the locomotive repair shops in Silvis, Ill.; Shawnee, Okla., and Horton, Kan. The shops, it was said, were operated intermittently throughout the present year.

Gold at High Mark

Ottawa, Ont., Dec. 31 (AP)—Canadian gold production touched a new high record in 1932, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics estimating it at $63,156,000.

STATE ST.

Hears:

That the early sessions of the new year will find the market facing what have heretofore been impenetrable levels. Any display of strength will prove reassuring. It is only necessary to break down nearby resistance to convince a majority of the trading fraternity that prices will go higher. The lesser risks appear to lie in buying setbacks in preference to selling rallies.

This and That

Union Pacific promises to give the shorts a merry time of it once things get under way. The stock has been well bought for weeks and it is doubted if the selling is as good. Every boardroom seems to have at least one or two bears on Pacific that are short anything from odd lots to good-sized blocks.

After three years of predicting good things to come it is said that our leading industrialists are becoming cautious. They promise to say little that is not ultra-conservative for 1933. This is a good sign, usually indicating industry is depending more on its own efforts that the nature cure.

It is all right to say that we have always worked out of previous depressions after allowing time for the evils which brought on the collapse to cure themselves. The real truth of the matter is industry put its house in shape and then went out after the business.

Odds and Ends

The policy of "laissez faire" or letting economic matters alone in the hope they will adjust themselves is also on its way out. When a credulous people are imposed on economics are distorted beyond belief. Perverted fundamentals must be readjusted by forthright action.

Johns Manville, whose sudden break to 17½ awhile back, unsettled those owning the issue seems anxious to redeem itself. The road is not clear yet. Once across 21½ those long Manville may breathe easy. The chances will then favor a price in the high 20s.

The talk of inflation seems to be dying down at a time when it should be picking up. The increasing gold supply of this country is the reason. Our store of gold is at a point where it should begin to exert a great deal of influence on prices in general.

Ticker Talk

The coppers are fooling some of the people who counted them out . . . After all, the price for red metal has to stop somewhere . . . At 5 cents it is almost in the investment class . . . And many big users are inclined to buy it there on that principle.

Kennecott is acting as though someone bought a lot of stock on the way down from 10 . . . This is the company which is the apparent ruler of the domestic copper field and it is worth keeping an eye on it . . . The others seem to have too many troubles.

There is plenty of gossip about the 1932 statement of Case . . . Many observers feel that the Russian payments have helped a lot . . . The important thing about Case is its ability to keep well above its 1932 low with wheat breaking to records lows.

SHAWMUT BANK OPENS BRANCH IN MATTAPAN

The National Shawmut Bank of Boston will open on Tuesday, Jan. 3, an additional branch office at 501 Cummins Highway, corner River st., Mattapan sq. The new quarters, in the building formerly occupied by the Federal National Bank, have been thoroughly remodeled and equipped with the most modern banking facilities, including spacious safe deposit vaults and the latest protective devices.

This new Shawmut branch, the 14th to be opened in Metropolitan Boston, brings to the Mattapan section the full services of the National Shawmut Bank and provides adequate banking facilities to take care of the needs of that fast growing community.

The National Shawmut Bank is one of New England's largest institutions, with resources well over $180,000,000. This conservative old bank has been actively connected with Boston and New England affairs since 1836. Its main office is located at 40 Water st., Boston.

It recently opened its thirteenth branch at City sq., Charlestown, and will open, about the middle of January, its fifteenth branch at 174 West Broadway, South Boston.

The opening of these new branches is in line with the established policy of the National Shawmut Bank to expand and extend its complete banking facilities to all sections of Metropolitan Boston.

BOSTON STOCKS CLOSE FIRM

Stocks were firm at the close of the year in today's dull dealings on the Boston Exchange. The final transaction of the year 1932 was a 25 share block of Eastern Steamship at 5¾, up ⅞ from its last closing price.

Edison Electric closed the year unchanged from its last closing price after selling up more than 2 points earlier in the session. New England Telephone was strong and closed at 92½, up more than 2 points. American Telephone was slightly below its last closing price at 104⅝.

Carrier Shares were mixed. Pennsylvania and Atchison were moderately higher while New Haven was down about a point. Boston & Maine issues were fairly active with the prior preferred and the D stamped showing slight gains. Boston & Maine B and C stamped issues were off.

New England Public Service gained more than a point at its closing price of 2¾. Small gains were recorded for such issues as Gillette, Torrington, United Gas Co. and United Shoe preferred. General Electric ended the week unchanged from its previous close. American Woolen preferred was slightly easier.

May 1933 Be Brighter and Happier

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Boston Evening American.

ANOTHER YEAR HAS PASSED TO HISTORY and never, so long as the sun shines, will any American look back upon it without a shudder. It has been a year of tragedy, and very few American homes have not been visited. Down through the generations will sound the dead year's dreadful tread of millions of jobless men. Ruin has come to hundreds of thousands who only a little while ago felt secure from economic pressure. Hundreds of thousands of farm homesteads have passed through the court of bankruptcy to other hands. Hundreds of thousands of the working class, saving their money against the proverbial rainy day, have found their savings swept away in bank failures in the midst of the ruin.

The result has been that a greater portion of the people have thought seriously on politics and government than ever before in our national life. Millions have excused themselves from pondering public governmental problems on the false theory that government is something apart from their lives. They know better now.

And the result has been a revolution in our political thinking—a revolution as fundamental in its meaning as that which was ushered in with the triumph of Democracy in 1800 when Jefferson was swept into power. As significant, if not more significant than that which came with the victory of Andrew Jackson in 1828.

Just what the meaning of this present upheaval is to be is with tomorrow.

But one thing we must face—our present institutions, our social system, the capitalistic system cannot survive many more years like that which happily is ended.

Nothing Has Been Done in 1932

Looking back upon the dead year we find that nothing has been done nor seriously attempted beyond the putting on of patches temporarily to save our House from utter ruin. We have been temporizing with fate. No real reforms in government have been wrought. Nothing actually has been done to remove the cancer that is eating at our vitals. We have been content, or rather, government has been content, merely to apply remedies to assuage the pain. We have been so accustomed to the futile happiness of a fool's paradise.

The moratorium accomplished nothing; it seems to have made matters worse. The creation of the Reconstruction Finance Corp. merely meant the placing of props to prevent the collapse of banks and great institutions whose fall would have meant an enormous spread of human misery. Nothing else has been done that will require a paragraph in history 50 years hence. We are as a boat drifting aimlessly without plan, upon the waters in a storm.

* * *

Eating the Fruit Of That Tree

The futility and failure of those in power has been impressed upon even the most rudimentary mind. That is the primary reason for the revolution in a party sense. But this revolution in our political thinking, as a result of the suffering of the last year, goes deeper than party. It is aimed at the theory of government which has been prevalent among those in power for a full generation. That theory has been that government is not concerned with the average man; that its machinery is meant to operate only for the benefit of the few at the top; that government properly may determine the personal habits and tastes of the people.

We are now eating the fruit of that three, and it is bitter.

* * *

We Have Been Hatefully 'Conservative'

The dead year has seen the passing of "conservatism" using the word in the sense to which we had become accustomed. Everyone is more or less radical today. Men who love to call themselves "conservatives" have urged such radical, revolutionary, unprecedented things as a governmental financing of private enterprises to prevent their wreckage. But government, as it exists at this hour, consoles itself with the thought that it has has not been so radical as to carry this semi socialism to the masses of the people. We have been hatefully "conservative" in dealing with the problems of the farms, and of the unemployed. Through private charity the national government has been trying to push back the rising tide of human misery with a pitchfork.

There are people who think this can be done yet.

But these are not conservative, they are stupid.

The political revolution in our thinking in the last year, asks only the conservatism of common sense; it demands the "radicalism" of political and social justice.

* * *

A New Idea Has Been Born

Out of the travail of the dead year a new idea has been born. Out of the revolution in the coming year shall, and must, come radical, drastic changes in our political, social financial and industrial systems.

The central thought is that government must recognize its obligations to humanity—must serve men.

That the nation is not composed of great corporations and financial groups alone, but of men, women and children.

That Jefferson was right in assuming that the primary purpose of government is to protect all alike, rich and poor, in the enjoyment of their inalienable right of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

And there is another idea which dominated government for 12 years that today is as dead as Pharoah's mummy—that government must step aside and let the powerful and unscrupulous and greedy in business work its will.

Those who once preached the absolute divorce between government and big business have been the first to rush to government for assistance. That assistance has been given. It is being given now. And by the same token the average man is demanding now that through government he, too, shall be protected—against the gluttony and greed of an exploiting class.

Unless that protection is given we shall very speedily have another revolution, which will go deeper than anything many of us dream of now.

* * *

"God Bless Us Every One"

So the new year starts with a new idea held by the great mass of all the people. It means a complete change in the attitude of government toward the average man. Out of the revolution in our political thinking has come a new President—a new leader who has shown himself to be in hearty accord with this new idea. Can he and will he bring the changes necessary for salvation to society? Of one thing we are certain—his heart is right upon these things; his intentions are the best; his courage is superb; and we have complete faith in his capacity.

The time for patching is past—we can't go on patching forever. We must rid ourselves of the old shacks and build more stately mansions for our souls. We have reached the point where social justice is "good business"; where social injustice is "bad business."

And the dead year has dealt a death blow to national prohibition. In nothing has there been a greater revolution in our thinking.

So out of the suffering of this dead year has come a change in the thinking of the nation which may bring infinite and permanent good. Otherwise our istitutions are doomed.

A terrible year—the cries of hungry children, the tears of anguished mothers, the misery of helpless men—and it is dead. God rest it in the grave—and forgive it!

And for the New Year let us offer the prayer of Tiny Tim—

"God bless us, every one."

WEEK OF PRAYER OBSERVED BY CHURCHES

Next week has been designated by the Federal Council of Churches as "The Week of Prayer" as has been the custom for a number of years. Many Protestant churches will, therefore, observe this special first week of the new year by prayer services. Topics for prayer have been agreed upon and widely distributed. They are:

Sunday, January 1, First Things First.

Monday, January 2, The Church's Treasure in Childhood and Youth.

Tuesday, January 3, The Unity of the Faith.

Wednesday, January 4, Facing Our Unfinished Tasks.

Thursday, January 5, Marshalling Our Resources.

Friday, January 6, A Witnessing Church.

Saturday, January 7, The Secret of Prevailing Power with God and Men.

GOD ALL IN ALL FOREVER NEAR

In all Christian Science churches tomorrow the subject for the lesson-sermon will be "God."

The Golden text is: "Praise waiteth for thee, O God of Sion: and unto thee shall the vow be performed. O thou that hearest prayer, unto thee shall all flesh come." (Psalm 65: 1, 2.)

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Then Paul stood in the midst of Mars Hill and said, Ye men of Athens, I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious. For as I passed by, and beheld your devotions, I found an altar with this inscription, To the Unknown God. Whom, therefore, ye ignorantly worship him, declare I unto you." (Acts iv, 22, 23.)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy. "Paganism and Agnosticism may define Deity as 'the great unknowable'; but Christian Science brings God much nearer to man, and makes Him better known as the All-in-All, forever near." (p. 596.)

Dudley St. Church Welcomes New Year

Great New Year's services will be held at the Dudley Street Baptist Church, Roxbury, at 10:30 in the morning and 7:15 in the evening tomorrow. At the morning service, Pastor Brooks will give a "First of the Year" and communion service. A special "Communion Meditation" by the pastor will bring a message for the year 1933. The Concorde male quartet will render "Draw Me to Thee" by Nevin; "Hymns of the Old Church Choir" by Miller, and "I Need Thee Every Hour" by Lowry. The junior choir of 75 will sing "Another Year Is Dawning" by Wesley. The hand of fellowship will be extended to new members at the close of the morning hour. At noon New Year's exercises will be participated in by all departments of the Sunday school.

At 7:15 p. m. will come music, "The Holy City," by Adams, to be sung by Miss Florence G. Young, soprano. There will be other solos and chorus numbers. Pastor Brooks will speak on "The Preludes and Proph[illegible] of 1933."

"Old Age Assistance" R. C. Welfare Topic

Old people, and young people expecting to grow old, will be interested to attend a talk by Mr. Francis Bardwell, of the Department of Old Age Assistance, who will appear next Tuesday evening before the class in Charitable and Social problems carried on by the Young Men's Catholic Association in Boston College High School.

What Do You Need Most in Year 1933?

Dr. James Whitcomb Brougher will preach on the wants of the coming year at Tremont Temple tomorrow evening. In the morning his topic is "My Master Mood." There will be a special musical program both morning and evening.

CUBS BATTLE TO INCREASE CAN-AM LEAD

FANNING

—With GEORGE UNDERWOOD—

'Cap' Huston Shopping. May Buy Into Red Sox. Giants, a Possibility. ↕ Jack and Jerry, Pals. House in the Suburbs. Why Dempsey Chose It.

Why Uncle Robbie Loves His Cincinnatti

IT IS PROBABLY only a coincidence, but it is fraught with interesting possibilities. Anyway, coincident with the news from out of the canebrakes of Georgia that Col. Tillinghast l'Hommedieu Huston, the man who brought Babe Ruth to the Yankees, is on his way No'th to New York, we hear that certain persons prominently connected with the Boston Red Sox also will be in Gotham next week. Col. Huston built Yankee Stadium and the present New York Yankees. The big engineer and the former commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars found life irksome on his Georgia hunting preserve and recently came back into organized baseball through the purchase of the Atlanta Club and the installation there of his old pal, Uncle Wilbert Robinson, as president. But Col. Huston's reawakened baseball ambitions are not going to allow him to remain in Atlanta. He is after a big league club. All the signs along the trail indicate that before the season opens Huston once more will be a big league owner. Whether it will be Giants, Reds or Red Sox Huston will be identified with is a matter of conjecture. Certainly two better loved baseball men than Bob Quinn and "Cap"—Col. Huston always will be "Cap" to most of us—never stepped in shoe leather. If Huston allied himself with Quinn here the pair would be the most popular combination in baseball and with Babe Ruth's acquisition as playing-manager, the halcyon days certainly would return to Boston.

M-m-m-m! Smack! Houck's Off the Wood!

Col. Huston—"New York is my old bailiwick. If I could get hold of the Giants I soon would make my old partner Jake Ruppert sit up and take notice. But Boston is a great baseball town a great baseball town. Boston is just ripe for renaissance

Uncle Wilbert—"What kind of fruit is a renaysance, Cap? Or is it some new kind of beer? Say, Cincinnati is where we ought to buy in, Cap. Best beer on the circuit! Do you remember Houck's off the wood in Zinzinnati, Cap? Gee, I'd just like to have my foot up against the rail in the old Mizpah on Vine st., lapping up some of that Houck's off the wood! But, as you say, if you an' my old pal Jawn McGraw could hook up in New York you certainly could give Jake Ruppert and the Yankees a run for patonage. An' Boston sure is a great baseball town and things is ripe there for a big baseball comeback. But if we go to N'Yawk or Bawston, Cap, what are we goin' to do without our Zinzinnati beer. Ge, Cap, picture livin in Zinzinnati with beer coming back"

Col. Huston—For Gawd's sake Robbie, stop talking of beer! Don't you know I'm on the water wagon? Say, can you picture what life would be put back in the game if Babe Ruth and I came to Boston. New York's my old bailiwick and Jawn McGraw is one of the best fellers in the world. Jawn and I should hit it off great. But Bob Quinn is one of God's noblemen and Boston's the spot—Boston's the spot!"

Uncle Wilbert—"Yeah, Boston's the spot, all right, Cap. Me an' you an' Bob would make things hum in Boston. But I never did like that Boston beer. Now that Houck's off the wood out in Zinzinnati——" Curtain.

Shamus Back Another Peg

It certainly does begin to look as if your old pal, Jim Maloney, really is on his way back. That Leo Mitchell Socking Shamus stopped in the seventh round down in Philadelphia, last Thursday night, is no palooka. It was natural for Maloney to look slow and cumbersome in his first fight in a year and a half against Johnny Dixon, who is a hard man to fight, anyway. Dan Carroll is bringing Maloney back along the right lines. What Shamus needs is action. With a few more fights under his belt, it will be the old Maloney who will answer the gong. The fans always are glad to see Maloney in one of the corners. Shamus never yet failed to give the addicts a run for their money.

The Heart of a Play Boy

Jack Dempsey is something of a Play Boy. He likes the Broadways of the World. Whenever he came to New York you always would find him housed in one of Broadway's swankiest hotels. This time, however, Dempsey is living in a modest little home out on Long Island. The reason? Jerry Luvardis—"Jerry the Greek." Dempsey's faithful trainer and pal is Jerry the Greek. They are inseparable as Damon and Pythias. Jerry the Greek is ill. The doctor said he demanded quiet and rest more than anything. And that is why Dempsey got that little place out on Long Island. He wanted quiet and rest for Jerry the Greek and to nurse him back to health. Therein, friend fans, is why so many of us love Jack Dempsey. A man who does not forget his friends, never is forgotten by them.

Only Over Jerry's Dead Body

Speaking of Dempsey and Jerry the Greek, we'll never forget an incident that occurred when Dempsey was training at the Lincoln Fields Race Track for the Battle of the Long Count with Tunney in Chicago. Something happened one night. We never found out just what it really was. But anyway, Dempsey was threatened with death. Guards were posted all about the Dempsey quarters. But that didn't satisfy Jerry the Greek. With Dempsey snoring peacefully, Jerry the Greek stole to Jack's door and lay down across it, with a rifle resting in the hollow of his arm. Like a faithful dog, Jerry the Greek slept across his master's door all night. And harm only could have come to Dempsey over the dead body of little Jerry the Greek. That is only one thing explaining the bonds of friendship between "The Chomp," as Jerry still calls Dempsey, and his faithful servitor. But you never hear Jack Dempsey referring to Jerry Luvardis as a servant or a hireling. Dempsey will tell you, "He's my Pal!"

Molyneaux on Loan to Beavers

New York, Dec. 31 (AP) — The New York Rangers of the National Hockey League announced they had loaned Larry Molyneaux, promising young defenseman, to the Quebec Beavers of the Canadian-American League for the season.

Molyneaux, who is only 18 years old, was a member of the defunct Springfield Indians, Ranger farm. He comes from Newmarket, outside Toronto, and is playing his first season of professional hockey.

Y.M.H.A. Five Faces Malden C. C. Tonight

The New England champion Boston Y. M. H. A. basketball club is traveling on high, with a clean record of six straight victories to date, and a victory over Malden City Club tonight is most desirable, when they meet at the Y. M. H. A. gymnasium on Seaver st.

The Malden City Club aggregation, which consists of ex-college star players from different parts of Greater Boston, should extend Coach Johnnie Fox's boys to the limit.

TROJANS WORK IN ROSE BOWL

Pasadena, Calif., Dec. 31 (AP)—The West's most frequent and successful defender of intersectional football honors, Southern California, bivouacked within ear-shot of the Rose Bowl today, to begin the burdensome task of awaiting its game with Pittsburgh there next Monday.

In [illegible] afternoon the [illegible] set foot on the sod into which [illegible] backers and [illegible] partisans expect they will trample the hopes of Pitt's Panthers.

Here they will rehearse for the last time the plays designed to defeat the unbeaten invaders from the East. After that, Troy's mighty men victorious in 19 consecutive games will return to the business of waiting.

The brief workout is intended to familiarize the Californians with Rose Bowl conditions, although a number of the squad were there only a year ago, participating in the 21 to 12 defeat of Tulane.

One, Ernie Smith, giant all-American tackle, was present when the Trojans plastered an unmerciful 47 to 14 loss on the Panthers three years ago. But he was a freshman then playing first trombone in the Southern California band.

Southern California won its first Rose Tourney test from Penn State 14 to 3 back in 1923. The classic, now in its 18th year, has been nothing but a bed of thorns to Pitt. The Panthers lost to Stanford 7 to 6 in 1928. In 1930 Coach Jock Sutherland's eleven was bowed in the most disastrous defeat ever written into the annals.

Hagen Says Bay State Boy Coming Champ

By BILL GRIMES

Since the days when Mike Brady and Tommie Kerrigan were numbered among the country's outstanding golfers the Bay State has failed to develop a professional with sufficient ability to hold up his end against nationally known stars.

But according to no less [illegible] thority than Walter Hag[illegible] former United States and Brit[illegible] open champ[illegible] of P. G. A. [illegible] soon be [illegible] Henry Picard who received his start in golf while caddying at the Plymouth Country Club.

"Young Picard is the coming golfer of this country" declares "The Haig." "I have never seen a veteran with more poise than that kid. He has tremendous distance with woods and irons and the finesse to carry him right through to the top ranks. And, apparently, he has no nerves.

"I have been in this game long enough to appreciate that youngsters when they are pitted against former national champions, 'choke.' Naturally, I had no suspicion that Picard would be the exception that proved the rule. But, I had the wrong slant on this kid. He actually made me look foolish in the Carolina play-off. I was struggling from the first hole, which, by the way, he 'birdied,' and wound up with a 79, ten more than my young opponent."

EVEN FOR 72 HOLES

Picard entered the Carolina State championship which was staged recently at the Starmouth Golf Club at Greensboro, N. C. It was not only one of his first championships but his initial start against any star of the Walter Hagen class. At the end of 72 holes Picard and Hagen were tied for first place with 293's.

On a Sunday afternoon, before a gallery of 2000 golf enthusiasts, Picard and Hagen played off for the title. Prior to the start of the extra 18-hole round, Hagen was an odds on favorite. He was the [illegible] choice of a [illegible] experience [illegible]

Picard was as cool as though he was engaged in a playing lesson, according to George Corcoran, brother of the State handicapper, who is the pro at Starmount. Henry lost no time in taking the lead, coming up with a birdie at the first hole. To make a long story short, he turned in a sub par round of 69 which was just 10 strokes lower than Hagen.

RATED AS COMING CHAMP

Any young pro who can shoot a 69 against Walter Hagen in a playoff for a State championship is deserving of attention and "The Haig" was the first to proclaim Henry Picard as a coming champion.

Although Picard never played in any tournaments in these parts while caddying at Plymouth or during the seasons he was assistant to Donald Vinton, his ability was, nevertheless, known to his fellow bag toters as well as to the members of the Plymouth Country Club.

During the winter months Picard went south with Vinton and recently he was appointed professional at the Charleston, S. C., Country Club, succeeding his former boss.

Picard is anxious to locate in New England during the summer months, but he is a fixture at Charleston for the winters. New England, in general, and the Bay State in particular, could capitalize on a golfer of Henry Picard's ability and already two or three Greater Boston clubs are angling for his services.

CHICAGO BAN ON DEMPSEY ASKED

Chicago, Dec. 31 (US)—A protest against the participation of Jack Dempsey or other outside promoter in the heavyweight match between Max Schmeling and Max Baer [illegible] license to Chicago was [illegible] the Illinois Athletic Commission by Sidney Strotz, president of the Chicago Stadium Corp. [illegible] a member of the athletic commission has had several conferences with Dempsey with a view of bringing the match here in June during the World's Fair.

Strotz' letter to the commission points out that a non-resident of Illinois is ineligible to be a promoter in the state. While this is true Dempsey previously was issued a license to promote here and did stage several shows at the Coliseum. In the event the Schmeling-Baer match is brought here it is the plan to hold it at Soldier Field where the Tunney-Dempsey bout was staged.

Grace Period Asked for Jackie Fields

Detroit, Dec. 31 (AP)—James M. Brown, president of the National Boxing Association, mailed letters today to commissioners in the 32 member states in the association asking a vote on an extension of time for Jackie Fields, welterweight champion, before his title is declared vacant by the association.

Brown said today that articles are on file in his office for a title fight between Jackie Fields and Young Corbett of Fresno, California, at some California point on Feb. 22.

The Fields-Corbett bout will take place only if a majority of commissioners in the N. B. A. states vote favorably on a time extension, Brown said.

Field's title was scheduled to become vacant today.

Manager Boucher to Play Against Quebec Tonight

The Quebec Beavers [illegible] in the [illegible] American [illegible] did not meet with success against New Haven, Philadelphia and Providence, the Beavers are a far better club than is indicated by their position in the Can-Am standing. They are a stronger aggregation than exhibited here early this month having acquired a first-class defense man in Jim Arnott who was with the Springfield Indians.

Manager Boucher will start his high scoring line, Bud Cook at center and Ted Saunders and Ded Klein on the flanks. He will have Myles Lane and Joe Jerwa on the outer defense and Percy Jackson in the nets.

HIGH SCORERS

Cook and Saunders are making a runaway race of the battle for individual honors. Cook is topping the league while Saunders is a close second, having scored more than twice as many goals as any other player below him. Klein is just hitting his stride, and he will soon be pressing his team mates.

Peggy O'Neil, the scrappy youngster who is playing his first season of pro hockey, will be the play maker of the second line, working with Pinkie Davie and Happy Harnott, while Connie King, Buck Buckles and Donnie Weir will comprise the third trio. Weir was suspended for three majors during the Philadelphia game a week ago and will make his first home appearance in a fortnight.

The Cubs are traveling at a championship clip and are anxious to extend their advantage over the Arrows and Reds.

BABE MAY LOSE FORTUNE BY SILENCE

By DAVIS J. WALSH
International News Service Sports Editor

New York, Dec. 31 (INS)—Mildred "Babe" Didrikson, the lady whom A. A. U. officials unintentionally befriended by making it possible for her to have nothing further to do with them and whose monetary value a week ago was very great, was still in hiding today. From what, nobody seemed to know, unless maybe it was the good fortune that might have been hers for the asking.

The fortune is here, the lady is not and although I've known all too little about both, I'd be inclined to say that good fortune is like good beer. Once the lid is off it won't keep.

NOBODY LOOKING

They have organized a conspiracy of silence since the headlines [illegible] 10 days ago the idea being to whet the public appetite. I'm a little slow of comprehension so maybe I've got that wrong. Maybe after all they meant wet. Anyhow in making her hard to find they seem to have overlooked the fact that nobody is looking.

At the moment the lady is living at a resort not more than 250 miles from here while her agents are dickering for contracts that are becoming relatively more reluctant as the general bluster dies quietly in its own echo.

The boys have gone stealthy and mysterious at a time when they should have been loud and blatant. They should have brought her in here to confront the money while its resistance was still low and before it began moving elsewhere as money does and will and should if not confronted vigorously and with decision.

NO GOLD IN SILENCE

Instead they've temporized. They've wasted the priceless boon of publicity. Instead of sending her in behind a band wagon, they have decreed that she become exclusive. There's no money in exclusiveness. In fact, some of the 400 are now so exclusive that they can't be seen except on an average of ten hours a day in department store basements.

Miss Didrikson will make a certain amount of money through specific contracts already arranged. But, as they permit her fame to dwindle by the hour and die by the day, she becomes less valuable to their interests and unfortunately considerably less valuable to her own.

SULLIVAN CUP TO BAUSCH

By vote of 600 sports leaders who comprised the tribunal for the award of the Sullivan medal, Bausch has been adjudged the amateur athlete who "has done most during the past year to advance the cause of sportsmanship."

39-VOTE MARGIN

The final tally of ballots favored Bausch by a margin of 39 votes—687 to 648. These two spread-eagled the opposition from eight rivals in the final balloting. Together they received just short of half the total of 2712 votes.

"BABE" FIFTH

Mildred "Babe" Didrikson of Dallas, great all-around track and field performer, was fifth with 224. W. Barry Wood, Harvard's football, hockey and baseball star, sixth with 151; Leo Sexton of New York, Olympic shotput champion and world record holder, seventh with 1[illegible]; Lieut. George Calnan, national fencing champion, eighth with 85; Ralph Metcalfe of Marquette, national sprint champion, ninth with 62, and Jack Shea of Lake Placid, N. Y., Olympic skating champion, tenth with 27.

Lack of weight cost Downey a chance to get a big league tryout. The Leafs have so many lightweights now that they were skeptical about Downey, who is really a flyweight, but, at the same time, a game, scrappy right-winger. Incidentally Adams is a left hand shot but was played at right wing by the Leafs against the Maroons.

MISS RAWLS HAS 4TH RECORD

Miami, Fla., Dec. 31 (AP)—A world's record for the 500-meter free style swim for women was claimed today by Lenore Kight of Homestead following an exhibition by members of the 1932 Olympic and national swimming teams here.

She made the distance in 7 minutes 2 3-5 seconds yesterday clipping 9 2-5 seconds from the recognized time of Helene Madison of Seattle.

Katherine Rawls, 15-year-old Fort Lauderdale, Fla., youngster laid claim to her fourth record of the meet with a time of 1:22 5 seconds for the 300-yard medley. Eleanor Holm set the previous mark at 4 minutes and 16 seconds.

Joan McSheehy of New York won a 75-yard back stroke event yesterday in 53 2-5 seconds. Dorothea Dickinson of New York placed first in the 150-yard free style in one minute and 46 seconds and Margaret Hoffman of Scranton, Pa., won the 200-yard breast stroke in two minutes and 56 seconds.

D'GLANE REJECTS BID

CHAMP. BALKS AT TERMS FOR SONNY BOUT

By JACK CONWAY

Henri DeGlane failed to come to terms with Paul Bowser for a world's heavyweight championship wrestling bout with Gus Sonnenberg following a conference which lasted for an hour and a half.

DeGlane denied he is afraid to risk his title against the old Dynamiter, but he insisted he was entitled to more money for such a match than he had been offered by Bowser.

"Since I won the championship by defeating Strangler Lewis at Montreal, I have wrestled for smaller purses than anybody who has ever held the title," said DeGlane. I did this because I was anxious to keep in action as much as possible so as to convince the American public I was a real champion.

MONEY ONLY OBSTACLE

"I'll tell you frankly that the only objection I have to a bout with Sonnenberg is the amount of money I shall receive for my services. Sonnenberg has got the mistaken idea he is the greatest drawing card in wrestling. He wants almost as much money as has been offered to me by Bowser.

"If Sonnenberg thinks he can lick me, he should be satisfied with the small end of the purse. I merely ask a champion's percentage."

It is understood Bowser has offered to give D[illegible] per cent of the gate [illegible] per cent. The promo[illegible] give more [illegible] the match.

If the champion's demands were granted, Bowser would have to reduce Sonnenberg's percentage. DeGlane feels Gus should be glad to wrestle for 12½ per cent of the gate.

MEET AGAIN TUESDAY

When Sonnenberg wrestled Strangler Lewis for the title in the Garden he accepted 7½ per cent of the gate. Lewis received a guarantee of $50,000. The show drew $78,000 which gave the Strangler the lion's end of the spoils.

Bowser announced he will hold a meeting with DeGlane and Sonnenberg at his Chauncy st. office on next Tuesday noon. He will make another effort to get the big fellows to sign for a bout at that time.

Bowser says he would like to stage the title tussle on January 13 if satisfactory terms can be arranged.

McLaughry Offer Just "Friendly Inquiry"

New York, Dec. 31 (AP).—L. W. St. John, athletic director of Ohio State University, told the Associated Press it was "just a friendly inquiry, with no definite purpose in mind" when he asked D. O. (Tuss) McLaughry, Brown's head football coach, about his availability for another job.

"Several years ago I talked with McLaughry about the possibility of his coming to Ohio State, at a time when we were making a change, said St. John. He told me then, as he has now, that he is tied up with Brown and satisfied to stay there. It was just a friendly inquiry when I mentioned the subject to him here again, having in mind that there are several openings in the coaching profession elsewhere.

"As to Ohio State, Sam Willaman is our head coach and we have no thought of making any change. We are perfectly satisfied at Ohio State with our present organization and I regret any conversation I had with McLaughry should have been so confused."

Hecht Faces Hard Semi-Final Match

New York, Dec. 31 (AP)—Mark Hecht, brilliant young tennis star from the University of Pennsylvania, today faced the prospect of finding a stumbling block in the hitherto smooth path toward his third consecutive national indoor junior tennis title.

The other match brought together Dick Hebard, Hill School, Pottstown, Pa., and Giles Verstraten, New York, second and third respectively on the list of seeded players.

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

JOE GILMAN OF the Boston Garden has convinced me he wasn't bluffing in regard to his efforts to help boxing in Boston. When the Garden announced its program for "New Talent" shows, it set January 9 as the date for its opening tournament.

It was then called to the attention of Gilman and Matchmaker Bill Ames that the Irish American A. C. was staging the finals of its Diamond Belt tournament at the Arena on January 9. The Irish American outfit is the only local amateur club which has survived the boxing depression. It has carried on in the face of heavy odds.

Mr. Boston

The Garden program calls for four and five round bouts. There will be 50 rounds of boxing on each card.

The "New Talent" shows is a move in the right direction. Billy Ames says this is the first real attempt to develop Boston and New England boxers since the untimely death of Tom Goodwin. It was Goodwin who helped develop Jack Sharkey, Jim Maloney, Al Mello, Sammy Fuller, Red Chapman, Dick Finnegan and other local ring warriors who went on to win high honors in the boxing game.

Goodwin had marvelous patience with youngsters. He would first have them taught the fundamentals of boxing. He would then match them carefully until they had acquired the necessary experience.

Tom would start the building-up on a new star by pitting him against experienced boxers who were well on the down grade. Later on he would send them against first class opposition.

There wasn't anything that Goodwin liked better than finding a new ring prospect. He would take the youngster in hand, lavish money and attention on him, see that he had the best training facilities possible, and root like a pop-eyed fan as his new protege started his climb for fistic fame.

Never Managed a Boxer

GOODWIN NEVER attempted to secure control of the management of any of the boxers he helped. He considered the manager an important part of the boxing game. He felt he was entitled to proper compensation for his efforts, and never tried to cut in on his end of the boxing game.

Bobby Goldman, manager of Al Mello, Rip Valenti, manager of Sammy Fuller at the time Goodwin lived, Johnny Buckley, Sharkey's pilot, Dan Carroll, who managed Maloney and Finnegan and Charley Cardio, Chapman's boss, were Goodwin's chief boosters. He had the happy faculty of getting everybody to co-operate with him.

Furthermore, Goodwin seldom had a boxer or his manager sign a contract for a bout. He made oral agreements. He always kept his word, and expected other people to do the same thing. If a man once broke faith with him, he didn't do any further business with him.

I hope the Garden follows the Tom Goodwin example in every way.

Fuller Agrees to Meet Canzoneri, Barney Ross

New York, Dec. 31 (US). Business of [illegible] an opponent for [illegible] Canzoneri, world's lightweight champion, occupied the entire Friday afternoon in the boxing directors room at Madison Square Garden.

Present and voting were Samuel Goldman, Tony's manager, and Daniel Carroll, counsel for Sammy Fuller. It was unanimously agreed that the only ingredient needed for a couple of perfectly dandy evenings is Barney Ross, the up-and-coming Hebrew lad of Chicago.

Goldman said he would be only too happy to have Tony meet the winner of a match between Fuller and Ross. Carroll accepted both matches.

Director Johnston dispatched an offer to Sammy Pian, manager of Ross, asking him to meet Fuller here in February. The fight off with the champion is tentatively scheduled for March.

Nova Scotia to Send Ring Team to Boston

Amherst, N. S., Dec. 31—To choose a team of Nova Scotia fighters for an invasion of Boston, an elimination boxing tournament will be held at Amherst early in January. It will be open to all amateurs of the province.

Arrangements for the tournament are being made by D. J. MacCarthy, Amherst, chairman of the maritime boxing championships committee, who has a telegram from Dan Ferris of New York, secretary of the American Amateur Union, asking for entries of one fighter in each class. It is understood the Boston tournament will commence on January 23.

SCHOOL HOCKEY LEAGUE RACE ON AT GARDEN

Schoolboy Ice Card

Medford high vs. Cambridge Latin.
Arlington high vs. Rindge Tech.
Belmont high vs. Stoneham high.
First game starts at 1 p. m.

By BILL CONNELL

[illegible] prepared for the brilliant four-game opening of the Greater Boston Interscholastic Hockey League schedule at the Garden this afternoon.

Tuned to fighting pitch by final stiff workouts in the Garden, all the teams look forward to desperate battles. In this league's brief race which winds up at the Garden February 11, each game has a large bearing on the final standing. So each coach planned on tossing his full strength into action this p. m.

A 54-piece band, the crack Waltham high school music unit, tuned up its instruments for the afternoon's work. Led by three drum majors, this band was to lend much color to the excellent program.

FOUR CRACK REFEREES

Pre-game forecasts were very much of a gamble, for none of the teams have had a chance to show ability, or lack of it. All the games were certain to be very briskly fought.

Newton was the choice over Melrose, Cambridge Latin and Medford seemed even, Rindge had something on Arlington and the Belmont-Stoneham affair was very much of a tossup.

NEWTON FAVORITE

But Nat Sostilio and Charley Houghton, hefty defense duo, and center Alex Kevorkian, 195 pounder, made it seem that Newton would halt the Melrose attack.

Gerry Desrosiers had hopes of leading Cambridge Latin to victory. Medford's better seasoned icemen were prepared to argue the issue. Bob Chipman, Jack Reilly, Jack Muench, Dick Stewart and Ray Wilkins are experienced players who carry the large part of the Medford work.

Charley Madeiros, Jack Callahan, "Socks" Donabed and goalie Marty Roscio, shape up well among Sonny Foley's Rindge Tech icemen. Arlington hasn't indicated that its work can halt these youngsters.

Belmont and Stoneham top the card. George Ford of Belmont is one of the finest school hockey players of recent years. Leo Ecker, Frank Gardner, Jack Devlin, Win Taft and others are in the supporting cast for Belmont. [illegible] that offensive line. Not forgetting Bill Hook, another ace forward.

OFFENSIVE SEXTETS

The Belmont-Stoneham game should be great, because both teams appear to be offensive groups. There will be little defensive hockey displayed by these teams.

Or by any of the other school sixes in action today. For which reason hundreds of paying guests were ready to march to the Garden wars.

Special Holiday Programs Due

Big Air Doings Usher Along New Year

ohh-KAY, Father Time! !

Good old year was it? Some say yes and some no, even as [illegible] of radio programs that pass in a year of nights. So it's all over after this day. Too bad for 1932—Take it away!

• • •

GIVEN THE AIR

Tune in the New Farewell forever Thirty Two Uncle Sam's gone Democratic,
Tired of hearing static,
Sputtering when he has work to do.

Let's have Thirty-three awhile
With a new deal on the dial,
A far better program to be had.
Everybody give three cheers,
All now being broadcast isn't bad.

Hark! Those tuneful chimes
Ring to herald better times,
Truly joyous tidings to all men
They're pealing loud and clear,
So let's banish hate and fear,
Work to hurry Happy Days again!

LOCAL LATHER

Russell Dorr, the youthful baritone coming along speedily of late, has been employed to contribute some special singing tomorrow afternoon (WNAC) at 3.45, while Francis J. Cronin mans the mighty console . . . They say the following [illegible], but [illegible] beetle brow the owl here still thinks it a bit if not a lot of sour pickle juice. Meaning that yarn about a dozen beauteous Boston gals getting together and raising money for a 15-minute program on one of our better stations to voice last minute leap year appeals for 12 acceptable gentlemen who might not care to spend 1933 unattached. By jingo, it's original. Rather commercialized, yet none the less an idea . . . Sam (WBZ) Ross the Artist Bureau man hereabouts will never forget his being directed to his Music Hall seat in Radio City, New York the other night. Sam didn't dress in his swallowtail suit being enroute back to Boston. Incidentally he was the only informally attired gent present. There were of course, such moguls as M. H. A[illegible] with Owen D. Young, the junior John D. Rockefeller, a few Morgans and others of their status sitting to the right, left and rear of our Mr. Ross. Mind over matter probably kept him [illegible] personal friend of Roxy himself he wouldn't have gained entrance even . . . Well the colyum won't be doing any more work this year so here goes for the sign off until next Tuesday. Happy New Year all.

PERSONALITIES OF THE AIR

The radio listener's list of Ten Most Ugly Words: Sponsor 10.

But after this evening's all night parade of music, your neighbors will differ deeply as to the power of music to set one aslumbering.

But if using music instead of gas and ether does work out, it will only bear out the rumor that musicians have been a drug on the market.

Looking into the future. Scene, Operating room, patient out, stitched singing "Why Was I Born." Surgeon crooning "I've Got You in the Palm of My Hand" while orch. plays "Here Lies Love." Patient sleeps, doctor cuts and then burbs "Operated By Mistake" as orch. breaks into "Let's Try Again."

Three Women

—By Faith Baldwin—

"You? And what would you do, pray? Like mother like daughter—wasters both of you!"

"I've lived under your hatred for over 20 years," she said. "You've kept me from life, you've kept me from love, you've kept me from my child. You've hated me always. It's been your passion, your indulgence. Shall I tell you—why?"

They had forgotten Joyce and the immediate issue.

SHE NEVER HATED

"I have never hated you," denied Louisa. "I have hated your st[illegible]. You—you are too unimportant to hate. If I have kept you from what you call life, love, it was because I could not permit any decent man to take you into his house, ignorant of what I know. If I have kept you from your child, it was because I hoped to save her from her heritage, from the consequences of her mother's erring weakness. Unto the third generation, Elizabeth—it was of no use."

"You lie!" said Elizabeth clearly, "and you know it. You have hated me because your son loved me; because Lennox loved me more than he did you, because he loved me so much. And I loved him so much that our union didn't wait on ceremonies. You have hated me because you were jealous. Jealous of your own son, jealous because I had from your son what no man had ever given you—love. I tell you."

ELIZABETH WENT ON

Louisa was [illegible] —I won't listen. Stop [illegible] But Elizabeth went on [illegible] mad [illegible] from herself [illegible] emotion [illegible]

"And then [illegible] love came to me [illegible] you do then? [illegible] word. [illegible] he would [illegible] gone on [illegible] afraid [illegible] of [illegible] beaten and [illegible] woman."

[illegible]

"You'll not do this to me!" she said. "And when I leave this house my mother goes with me!"

[illegible]

MASK BROKE

[illegible]

[illegible]

The old woman [illegible]

"Lennox!"

She beat on the [illegible] fists. She thought the [illegible] dered through the house.

He was not there. He had gone—with Elizabeth!

She saw with her blind eyes through those sleepless eyes. She saw Elizabeth back in the old house moving about softly, directing the nurses [illegible]

Footsteps beat hollowly on the uncarpeted stairs. She did not hear them. Terrified voices spoke beyond the door. She did not hear them.

THERE WAS A KING, LONG, LONG AGO—what his name, where he lived, or who told about him, I can't remember. At any rate, there was this king and he was very wise and he felt himself in need of a slogan—a philosophy by which he could rule his life. So he sent abroad throughout his kingdom and offered a prize to the one who could give him the best slogan to keep him, as he put it, "humbly in prosperity and hopeful in poverty." This is the one he chose, "This, too, shall pass away." We have told that story to dozens of people with as many different results as there were listeners, but we still agree most fervently with the king. "This, too, shall pass away" is to us a great slogan. It has encouraged us to walk through shadows knowing that in a moment the sun would appear. It has made the sunshine more glorious because we felt we must enjoy it to the full before darkness blotted it out again. It has steadied us when the good things of life came flooding in, and it has made us keep our chin up time and time again when we might have been utterly discouraged. It has given us a longer look, so to speak—a farther vision, enabling us to see beyond the things of the moment. "This, too, shall pass away" has taught us the evanascence, the transcience of material things, teaching us that permanence is of the spirit. It is our New Year's gift to you. May it find you happy and keep you happy throughout the coming year.

Listen, World! A Letter to You

By ELSIE ROBINSON

MY DEAR—

How many years have I been writing, and you listening? Ten; fifteen; a long time. A quarter of one's life! And all that time, my debt to you has been piling up. For, though I've been doing something for you, you've been doing something much greater for me—and I've never thanked you. And now, here's the New year again!

Elsie Robinson

The Chinese have a custom. With each New Year they pay all old accounts not as a matter of form, but as a sacred obligation; a spiritual balancing of the record. And so today, before the New Year dawns, I'm going to try to balance my account with you.

Fifteen years of coming to you—and you've never known how I came or what you did for me!

I've come to you when I was in grief. Such desperate grief that everything in life had lost its meaning. Everything gone blotto. But the job had to be done—

And so I've come, stumbling through the blackness, fumbling through the bitterness, trying to put words together.

And suddenly, there it was—your hand. Your hand to hold to. When everything else was gone—swallowed in a grave, blotted out by a night—there was your hand.

Just a common hand, perhaps. Calloused by a hoe, or roughened by a darning needle and dish water, like my own. But there it was, taking up the paper after the day's work was done, turning the page to my column, holding that column steady—Holding ME steady! When everything else had failed.

My dear—how can I thank you!

I've come to you in shame. Come when I've blundered—blundered terribly. Thought I was doing right. Thought I was doing the true and brave thing but found, too late, that I'd made a mess of everything. And God only knows how I wanted to quit!

YOU say you know, too? You've wanted to quit yourself, after you, too, had blundered?

Well, maybe you do know. I guess you must. How else could you have helped me as you have? For there again, when I was lost, I found you. There was your faith to steady me. When others no longer believed in me, when I'd lost even my belief in myself—you still believed.

And I held to your faith as I'd held to your hand—and scrambled back, somehow.

And I've come to you in the hardest hour of all—when I was empty; too spent, too beaten to feel even fear any more, or grief, or anger, or shame. Empty!

And how you've filled me! Filled me with new eagerness, new curiosity, new pride and joy and strength and tenderness—just because you were there, somehow, at the other end of the line. Even the thought of you, battling on—bewildered as I was bewildered, yet, somehow, "smilin' through"—that was enough. That started me again.

Now fifteen years have gone and I've never thanked you. But how can I? How can I make you see?

I can't. There are no words. Tell you of my gratitude? But that's such a small word! Fifteen years of working together, living together like that; weeping together over our graves; fighting together; facing shame and fear together—that means something more than gratitude. Only three words can even begin to tell you what those years have meant—what you mean to me today. Just three words:

I LOVE YOU.

I LOVE YOU, MY DEAR.

You've helped me on with life. You've made me believe in men. You've brought me nearer to God.

Wherever you are—whoever you are—I'm loving you today!

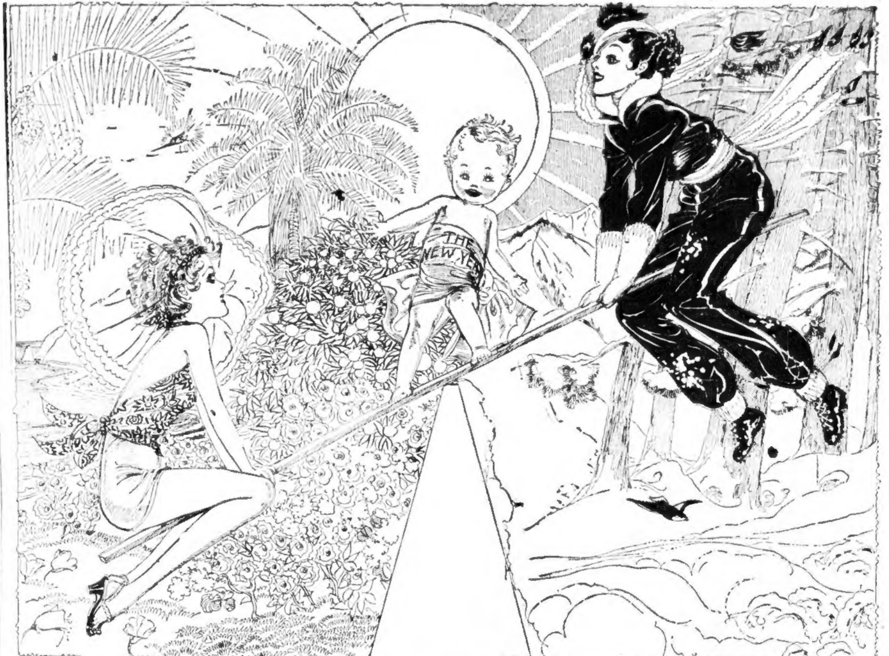
FROM WEST TO EAST :-: Drawn by Nell Brinkley



The Old Year's dying, and the New Year soon will be of age! Pretty young and new to mean so much! From East to West he's the topic of writing, thinking and singing. Of course he's wonderful and new, and the bells ring out as always—but will he be a GOOD boy, as well as a cute one? Vigil will be kept, resolutions firmly laid down, the bowl passed around, the Fates petitioned, from the blue Pacific to the grey Atlantic.

To the wader in the snow on the eastern side of our country, New Year's guest days mean deep snow, bare trees, howling winds and grey skies, the snow bird, red cheeks and stinging noses, toboggans, holly, the green wreath on the door and the sparkling tree.

To him it seems strange that the New Year season could be golden oranges hung on dark green trees, the scent in the air of lemon and orange blossom, roses such as never grew anywhere but in California, palms waving, a sea like azure silk and a sky to match, geraniums, violets, strawberries, and the girl in the picture in a bathing suit, instead of wool socks and toque.

Nevertheless, the New Year stands on the teeter-totter between the two and it is New Year time there as well as here, and all points between.

A Resolution: Good Health Next Year!

—By Dr. R. S. COPELAND—

WE are crossing the threshold of another year. How do we approach the problems of 1933? Is it in the spirit of defeat, or of courage and determination?

Dr. Copeland

What the year will bring us none can tell, of course, but it cannot be doubted that our attitude of mind will have much to do with the outcome. Sydney Smith or somebody said, "If wishes were horses beggars would ride." Our thoughts cannot determine the fate of a nation, but they have much to do with what each of us will do to help in the forward movement of mankind.

What you can do or what I can do, depends largely on our state of health. A sound mind in a sound body is essential to happiness and ambition. The mind will be sound in its functioning if the body is vigorous and normal in its every part.

Our outlook on life and our fitness to deal with its problems are founded on the state of health. In the last analysis, what we do today and on every day of 1933 will be determined by our physical welfare.

You and I have a direct, personal, selfish interest in the welfare of our country. It is the solemn duty of each of us to do a man's work every day in 1933. We cannot serve our own ends and certainly not those of our fellow citizens, if we neglect our bodies and suffer ill health in consequence.

Don't you see that in a sense, failure to preserve health is an unpatriotic act? It is a crime against society. No matter how humble may be one's position, he has a part in the world's work. The whole structure is weakened by one man's failure. He must fail in whole or in part if he has poor health. If that poor health is his own fault then he has done a wrong to his fellow men.

Let us face 1933 in full confidence that all will be well if we strive for the common good. With that spirit we can solve every problem that confronts us.

Advice on Love

She's Too Old to Be Cinderella

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 37 years of age, keep house for my father and also work. A young man who works next door to me, and who showed me every possible courtesy in business, finally fell in love with me and I was very happy. He came to the house several times, but my father always insulted him, and the last time he called my sister told him I was engaged to a man in the West. Since then he has been very cold to me, half the time not even speaking. I don't take an interest in anything any more and am very blue. My idea was to tell him that I loved him and did not want him to have a wrong impression of me. Positively there is no man in the West or anywhere else that I am interested in, with the exception of the one about whom I am writing.

M. T.

Dear M. T.: At 37 years of age a woman is too old to be bossed about like Cinderella. Maybe it's a bit too convenient for the family to have a daughter who works and also keeps house for them to think of parting with her. I hope Cinderella will write the young man a letter and tell him he has no rival in the West or any place else, and the best of luck to her.

Wants to Come Home to Die

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been married 20 years, and five years ago a woman threatened to come and tell me what she knew of my husband. This frightened him, and he went to live with his sister in another state. The woman came and told me a terrible story.

During the five years he was away he never sent me a cent, but always paid board to his sister. Now he is dying with t. b. and begs to come home to die. God only knows how I have managed to keep a home together all these years. His sister wants to get rid of him, now that he is ill and unable to give her any more money.

HIS WIFE.

Dear Wife:

In the city from which you write me there is an excellent sanitarium where tuberculosis patients are treated, free of charge, and it seems to me this would be a better solution of your problems than admitting your husband to your home, after all these years. You are without the necessary funds to make him comfortable, and probably would not know how to protect yourself from contagion. When he is in the sanitarium you can visit him and become reconciled. As you see, I have not published all of your letter. I think you have been very brave, indeed. My best wishes to you.

The Daily True Story

Don Bryan's Apartment

THE VERY DAY that Don Bryan signed a two-year lease for a bachelor apartment he met Marcia Goodwin. And a week later they were engaged, following a love-at-first-sight courtship.

Marcia's parents were a little bewildered by the sudden engagement but gave their approval, realizing, in fact, that to attempt to withhold it would make not the slightest difference. "Don and I don't believe in long engagements," their daughter told them. "We're going to start apartment hunting right away."

It took them only a few days to find just the apartment they wanted. The location was right, the size was right, the building was new and with modern conveniences. Only the price was wrong. That was somewhat higher than they thought they could afford. But they finally decided they would be able to pay it by giving up other things.

"After all," said Marcia, "a nice home ought to be the first consideration." And Don agreed with her.

A DILEMMA.

Then came the blow that wrecked all their plans. Don's landlord refused to allow him to break the lease on his bachelor apartment.

"I had entirely forgotten about it," he told Marcia. "I notified them today that I would be moving soon and they told me that I would have to pay for the entire two years. If I don't they'll sue me and get a judgment. A corporation owns the building and the superintendent said he had no choice. We just can't pay the rent for both apartments."

"But what will we do?" asked Marcia. Don, however, couldn't supply the answer. "I don't see any way out," he said. "I'll just have to pay up and we'll have to postpone the marriage."

"Two years!" exclaimed Marcia. "We can't do that. There must be someway."

But they had found no way when, two days later, Don had to go out of town on a business trip. He had to leave in such a hurry that he sent his keys to Marcia and asked her to stop by his apartment and pack a bag for him and meet him at the station. "I won't have time to go up there from the office and back again," he told her.

MEET AT THE STATION

Marcia met him at the station and said a tearful goodby, though Don assured her he would be gone for only a day or two.

"I won't even have time to write you," he said, "because I'll be back before the letter could reach you. And I'm going to do a lot of thinking on this trip. There must be some way to get out of that lease."

He returned late the following night. As he opened his apartment door and switched on the lights he noticed an envelope that had been slipped under the door. He picked it up, opened it and read the enclosure. For a moment he couldn't believe what he read. Then he ran to the phone and called Marcia.

"Oh, I was hoping that would happen," she said.

"You were hoping it would happen?" asked Don. "What do you know about it. I just got the letter."

MARCIA EXPLAINS

Again Marcia laughed. "You remember that I had your keys, don't you?" she said.

"Well, on my way down to the station I stopped at one of those places where they make duplicate keys in a few minutes and had a duplicate key made for your door. Then, after you had left, I went back to your apartment and just stayed there. I told mother and father I was staying with a friend. And I took particular pains that the superintendent and a lot of other people saw me. Whenever anybody passed in the corridor I would open the door and go out and call back like I was speaking to you, as though you were in the apartment, too. I'll bet every tenant in the building complained that you weren't everything you ought to be."

Suddenly Don understood. "But—but you shouldn't have done that," he said.

"Why not?" answered Marcia. "We're going to be married in a few days, aren't we. And it did make them break your lease for violation of the rules. At least, they thought you had violated them."

Grooming

Treatment for Riotous Hair

NOW AND THEN human hair gets riotous, falls by the wayside, all over the house, tangles up in the comb. Ofttimes this condition is nothing more than a clearing out of dead fibers. But to be on the safe side give the scalp a five minute friction every night, dipping finger tips in hot mineral oil wherever possible. Before the friction, brush the hair, strand by strand.

Off With the Old Before on With the New

BEAUTY specialists tell us that it is best to remove every vestige of one make-up before attempting to apply another. Business girls should keep beauty kits in their offices and refresh their complexions at least twice a day. The routine is, of course, cleansing cream, skin tonic, powder base, cream rouge, powder eye shadow, and lipstick. A package of cleansing tissues is quite essential.

Planning the Holiday Dinner

Suggestions That May Help

By MARTHA LEE

THERE'S SURE to be another influx of guests for dinner either tomorrow or Monday—and many a home-maker will be at her wits' end to think of something different and attractive to feed the carnivora. Perhaps this may help.

Let's be gay and start off with canapes and cranberry cocktails in the living room. Easy and delicious canapes are made on a foundation of toasted bread slices and fingers, spread with creamed butter to which a little anchovy paste has been added. Place a thin slice of stuffed olive in the center and sprinkle a little finely minced parsley around the edge or ends. Anchovy fillets may replace the olives. Progressing to the dining room we may find clear chicken soup with noodles or tomato soup with old fashioned tapioca "pearls," and then a big three-inch steak in a frame of fried onions.

Sweet potato balls stuffed with marshmallows, mashed white potatoes, chutney peas and hot rolls will finish the main course, and somehow a salad seems superfluous with a steak dinner.

For Dessert

For dessert, hot angel gingerbread with whipped cream or vanilla ice cream and coffee. Nothing the least bit difficult, is there—except to take care to broil the steak to the queen's taste. When you've accomplished the miracle of persuading your butcher to cut a rump steak three inches thick it would surely be a crime to cook it even a degree short of perfection. First, the broiling oven must be preheated for at least 15 minutes at 550, and the steak, salted and peppered, is popped in close to the flame. Let it sear two or three minutes and then turn it over, being sure to put the fork only into the fat. To prick the meat is to let the delicious juices escape.

Let broil 15 minutes, then reduce the heat to 450 and broil 20 minutes longer—35 minutes in all if you were successful in getting a three-inch rump steak.

To Serve Eight

One weighing three pounds will serve eight people and leave a little over to slice cold for sandwiches or to serve as you would cold roast beef. We find it far more satisfactory to order one of these thick steaks just for family use, cutting it in half before cooking, wrapping in waxed paper and holding it for later in the week. Steaks become more tender the longer they "hang."

For perfect fried onions, melt 3 tbsps. of butter in a heavy iron or aluminum frying pan. Add 4 large sliced onions, and brown. Then add ½ cup hot water, cover, and steam until tender. Heat a platter very hot, place a lump of butter on it, and then the steak, with more butter spread on top. Arrange the onions around it and place in the oven two or three minutes. Decorate with parsley and send to the table immejit.

Happy New Year to you all!

P. S.—Enrollments are coming in fast for the mid-winter classes of the Martha Lee Cooking School, which will open Jan. 3 and 4. There will be a class for brides and business girls on Tuesday evenings at 6:30, and a Homemakers' Class Wednesday afternoons at 2.

When the New Baby Arrives

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

A host of my girl friends gave me a baby shower. Will it be proper to send birth announcements to all of these people when the baby arrives? I wouldn't want them to think I expected anything from them because they have already showered me with gifts. Please tell me what to do.

O.

Don't think of these charming and gracious announcements as bids for gifts. They aren't, and needn't be regarded this way by either the sender or the receiver. And you should send announcements to all of your list of friends. If you omit anyone, and especially those who have been so friendly and generous to you, that person would have a distinct right to "wonder" at such an omission.

Alien Competition Destroys American Jobs; 'Buy American' to Abolish Breadlines

THE duty which rests upon each one of us to "Buy American" should not be viewed lightly.

It IS A SERIOUS, IMPERATIVE DUTY. It accosts our conscience as good Americans in stern and arresting tones.

THERE ARE TWELVE MILLION MEN AND WOMEN IN THIS COUNTRY WHO ARE OUT OF EMPLOYMENT, who have been laid off by mills and factories which have no orders to fill no work to be done, no wages to be paid. These unemployed workers are sober, industrious and loyal citizens.

Today they are largely dependent upon public and private charity for means of subsistence. This relief, so generously extended by our people, cannot long continue. The sources from which it is drawn are near exhaustion.

* * *

FROM another angle, the existence of such a vast section of the population without means of support postpones indefinitely and threatens even to destroy, the hope of business recovery Through the idleness of so many millions of our people, trade and industry are deprived of a great market. A great consuming public is withdrawn from economic life and contact.

All that this great number of our people would normally consume, of food and clothing; all that they would pay as rent; all that they would contribute to the common wage fund, as users of radios, automobiles and the countless products of our factories, are naturally lost so long as this condition of economic helplessness prevails.

And the condition will persist until orders begin to flow into our factories for the goods which they can make, and make well.

* * *

TODAY, the country's wants in unbelievably large degree are being met and supplied by foreign producers who land their products in this country in successful competition with our home manufactured goods.

Alien manufacturers and merchants have practically wrested the American market away from us and approprited it to themselves.

They are able to do this primarily because European and Asiatic currencies are so greatly depreciated. Their pauper labor is paid in wages lower than our own and in currency cheaper than our own. With this two-fold and cumulative advantage, the foreign producer laughs at our simplicity in still regarding the tariff as "protecting" our markets and the jobs of our workers.

IF WE BUY ALIEN GOODS WE BECOME PARTIES TO A WRONG. We become RESPONSIBLE for the INJURY WHICH OUR LABOR AND INDUSTRY SUFFER.

It is not the foreign manufacturer who is culpable. He is merely profiting by our ignorance of facts, which he sees clearly, and our indifference to them.

* * *

FELLOW-CITIZENS, IT SHOULD STOP! We must wake up. THE THING IS TOO ABSURD, TOO RUINOUS.

Already there are many signs that the patriotic call to "Buy American" is being heeded.

The spokesmen of labor are being heard. The workers' organizations are active. Merchants, great and small, industry's captains, employers who have sacrificed much and striven with great unselfishness to preserve the jobs and pay of their employes, individuals in all walks of life—are giving their attention to the problem.

IT IS ONLY NECESSARY THAT THE PERCEPTION OF THIS TRUTH SHOULD BE TRANSLATED INTO ACTION.

* * *

WHEN the movement to "Buy American" gains country-wide support, when our people generally realize how worthy an appeal it makes to their co-operation, there will be a beginning of the march back to normal conditions and a restored prosperity.

THE SIGNIFICANCE of the movement is NOT CONFINED to a little CHOICE MADE AT THE MERCHANT'S COUNTER. The process begins there, to be sure.

BUT THE SAVING GRACE OF IT BEGINS AT ONCE TO TRAVEL THROUGH ALL THE CLOSE-BOUND LINKS OF THE ECONOMIC TRAIN.

* * *

WHEN you "Buy American," the amount you expend starts promptly on its mission of relief to our stricken commerce. It soon reaches the factories, whose whistles will sound the call to the waiting workers. Then the wheels begin to turn and the wage envelopes are seen again.

The cry for help and succor begins to still. The workers are ON THE WAY TO THE STORE, NOT TO THE RELIEF STATION.

Soon the merchant's wares are exhausted and he finds himself ordering new supplies. The new orders bring new throngs to the worker's bench. The ranks of the unemployed begin to thin—at last!

And so the blessed process of recovery grows from day to day. There is new life in the towns and villages. Quickened and hurrying steps are heard again in the streets. It is harder to find parking space for the old car. The movie houses find their audiences coming back. It is not so easy to get a seat in the bus. At the store, you have to wait to be waited on.

* * *

IT WILL look almost like good times again. No one will doubt that business is reviving. AND THERE WILL BE NO STOPPING IT WHEN IT STARTS.

BUT THE AMERICAN PEOPLE MUST START IT.

AND THERE IS NO BETTER WAY TO START IT THAN TO "BUY AMERICAN."

Cooking Lessons

Cheap at $233,000

Back in 1887 Congress established a fund of $10,000 to study "the digestibility of different kinds of food for domestic animals."

In 1893 some Congressman, seeking jobs for constituents, had $10,000 added to this fund to study food for human beings.

In 1895 the amount was raised to $15,000.

In 1901 to $20,000.

This year, as the Bureau of Home Economics, its appropriation was $231,500.

Next year it will get $233,600.

However, you can get the value of your tax back if you want to.

Unpopular

Dead! Old Nineteen thirty-two is dead!
Parson, will you speak for him?
"Please ask another man instead,
Our people thought him rather grim."

Old Nineteen thirty-two passed on,
Will you good friend his praises speak?
"I'm sorry, but I shall be gone

Dominie, Nineteen thirty-two
Is dead, will you his rites attend?
"He was a man I scarcely knew,
I wish you'd ask some closer friend."

Dead! Old Nineteen thirty-two is dead!
What by the living shall be said?

How May the Relative Humidity of the Air Affect Our Comfort?

By DR. F. E. NULL,
Instructor in Physics.

Relative humidity is the ratio of the weight of water vapor the air contains to the weight it is capable of containing at the given temperature. Thus, a cubic meter of air can only contain 17.12 grams of water vapor at 20 degrees C. If it contains this amount it is said to be saturated. If saturated air is cooled, some of the water vapor will condense out as fog, rain, etc.

On the other hand, if cold air is drawn into a building and heated, the amount of moisture it can contain is greatly increased. This air will at first contain the same amount of water vapor as it did out-of-doors, but since it is capable of holding so much more, the rate of evaporation will be increased and it will seem very dry.

Rapid evaporation dries the skin and makes one feel uncomfortable. Any one not knowing the reason may imagine that he is too warm, and then raise the windows. This gives temporary relief to the skin as long as the air is cold, but as soon as it warms up, it feels as dry as ever.

There are two ways to overcome the difficulty. One is to evaporate water by some sort of a humidifier, and the other to allow the air to remain cold and to heat the body by radiant heat. Some experimenters have used electric heating elements and reflectors placed in niches in the walls.

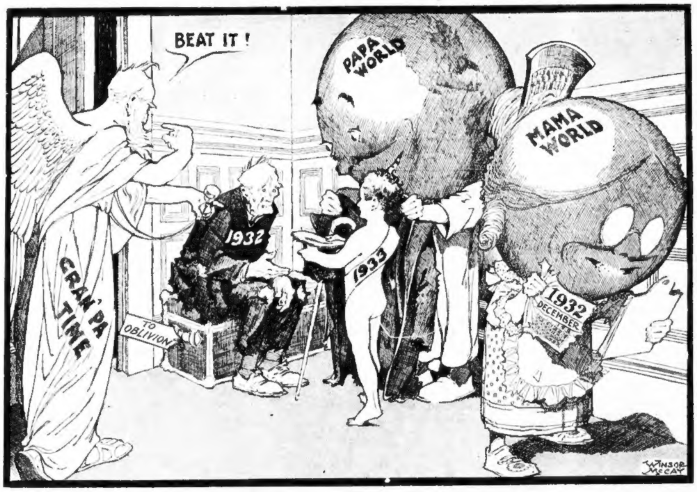
His Last Day



Farewell, a fond farewell, Old Year,
We hate to see you leaving,
(In other words, vamoose, Old Dear,
Before the boys start heaving.)
We grieve to think that you must go
And so we part in sorrow.
(And what a sweet relief to know
You won't be here tomorrow!)

Kind thoughts of you will linger on
In waking or in slumber.
And please forget the number.)
So here's your hat and cane, Old Year,
It was SO nice to meet you.
(And if you come again, Old Dear,
A sawed-off gun will greet you.)

O. O. McIntyre -:- New York Day by Day

At the Hospital

NEW YORK, Dec. 31—Called to a large hospital at midnight recently because of an accident to a friend, I find the most anxious hours are between 1 and 4 a. m. Human vitality is lowest and life's tide often ebbs. Nearly always during the muffle of night a clutch of terrifying drama!

Each hour, some surgeon is tingled out of sound sleep by the telephone. He hurries into clothes and out to a waiting motor for the sudden brilliant glare of the operating room. He must be awake in every nerve, for the slightest bungle, in an emergency, may cost a life.

The majority of horrifying casualties are at night. Drink, drugs and a belief darkness will hide clues of crime are largely responsible. But sometimes it is a policeman limp from a burglar's bullet, or a rouged hedge-flower whose lips are smeared with acid.

In darkened wards, tip-toeing nurses are followed by hungry eyes silently pleading not to be abandoned to the despair of solitude. It's at night the tortured mind reels and plunges like a rudderless ship. The bravest of the ill become frightened children.

Reception rooms after midnight are filled, too, with relatives who cannot sleep — watching, waiting. Now and then an ambulance hacks up, a stretcher slides out and a waiting interne fumbles for a pulse, shakes his head and jots on the registry book "D.O.A."—dead on arrival.

* * *

Speaking of hospitals, once in a while some vagrant columnar seed falls on fertile ground. Today from Seattle came a bright-jacketed, interesting book, "Hospital Nocturne." On a fly leaf the author autographs: "To O. O. M.—Because in the most difficult year of my life, he wrote 'I never knew a newspaper worker who, if he hung on, did not land a better job.' This book, humble as it is, is my better job, and you'll never know how responsible you are for it—Alice Eleanor Lambert."

* * *

In the race track's history there has never been such a year. Everybody suffered—from stable boy to trainer. Jockeys, invariably improvident, are worst hit. Their biggest asset is size and that's rarely cashable in other callings. Indeed, in instances, it becomes a handicap. A number are actually panhandling on Broadway.

* * *

Frequently, I wonder why some of the altruism so often running waste does not seep to those captive ladies hunkered in rooming house windows. Day after day they sit "like Patience on a monument smiling at Grief." As the old song has it: "She may have seen better days." Many years ago she answered the familiar ad: Wanted—A gentlewoman in reduced circumstances to occupy at very reasonable rate a bed-sitting room, with use of bath." And there, in life's backwash, she remains until the final adventure.

Idiosyncrasies: John Drinkwater does—four glasses before breakfast . . . Valentine Williams, mystery tale writer, likes to move every six months . . . Bert Lytell never smokes until after theater, during an engagement . . . David Warfield visits the Lambs every day, rain or shine . . . Arthur Samuels, magazine editor, still practises on the piano every day . . . Jack Norworth develops pictures as a hobby.

Jimmy Walker appeared but once in public with Betty Compton after her return to New York from abroad. This was on a veranda side of the Casino one after theater. Sitting quietly a long while, his companion murmured something. Jimmy shrugged slightly, and they whirled twice around the dance floor. Then departed.

Another manifestation of universal bleakness is the increase of gladhanders in the Times Square section. They are those lacquered worldlings who fly at one with outstretched hands and hums of ecstasy. It's a swift prelude to a minor gyp. After several such enthusiasms, one receives a telephone call asking if the glad-hander cannot see you "for just a moment." The business!

In earlier trusting years I was, if in pocket, good for the vicarious touch. And not averse to taking advantage of such myself. (Screaming chorus: And how!) But experience seasons. The only friends I ever lost were by such transactions. Doubtless I would have lost them anyway, but not the money. And that's important to a Scotsman.

11 Prosperity Policies for American Patriots

Please campaign vigorously for the following patriotic policies and try to express and crystallize popular sentiment for the information of the incoming administration and for the best benefit of the nation.

1—Buy American and spend American. See America first. Keep American money in America and provide employment for American citizens.

2—Raise tariff duties on articles manufactured by foreign labor pauperized by depreciated currencies to a point where the duties will offset the depreciation of the currencies, thus maintaining the American standard of living, protecting our home market for our home industries and providing work for our own American citizens.

3—Encourage Pan-American reciprocity, consuming Pan-American raw materials and opening the markets of North and South America to our manufactured products, while providing work for our unemployed.

4—Develop our Merchant Marine to serve our trade in times of peace and supplement our navy in time of war. The building and manning of ships make jobs for the jobless.

5—Encourage American air fleets to cover our country and connect us more intimately with other countries of North and South America. The more enterprise, the more work, and the more work, the more prosperity.

6—Encourage our railroads to make transcontinental extensions and transcontinental combinations and to co-operate with steamship lines to connect our industry with world markets. The more industry, the more employment, and the more employment, the more prosperity.

7—Complete east and west and also north and south transcontinental automobile highways, sixty feet wide, to encourage and accommodate "See America" traffic and to provide work and wages for the unemployed.

8—Complete federal flood control of Mississippi river and Colorado river and other rivers whose overflow is a menace to the lives and property of adjoining communities, thus benefiting the nation and providing work for the unemployed.

9—Complete inland waterways projects providing various sections of the country with water communication and the equivalent of sea coasts, thus knitting the nation together and providing work for the unemployed.

10—Complete all necessary developments of rivers and harbors, encouraging shipping and consequent commerce, providing work for the unemployed and stimulating the revival of prosperity.

11—Complete all possible water conservation and power development projects, increasing the wealth and resources of the nation and providing work for the unemployed.

The distribution of wealth in wages is the basis of all prosperity. Let the government inaugurate and vigorously prosecute during the period of this depression the campaign to buy in America, spend in America, see America, and keep American money in America. Then let every patriotic citizen follow the course the government inspiringly leads.
